MR. AND MRS. TUCKER BID GOOD-BY TO DOOMED SON

MOTHER FATHER FAINT AT FAREWELL

POLICE CAPTAINS LEARN WHERE O'MEARA STANDS

NEW COMMISSIONER TALKS STRAIGHT FROM SHOULDER TO ALL TWENTY.

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara told the twenty captains of the Boston police department to-day, on the occasion of his first official talk with them, that he was sorry to say that there were some rules of the department which were being publicly violated every hour of the day by members of the force.

He declared there were cliques and jealousies in the department.

He promised to call on all the captains, and he said he would not necessarily tell them when he was coming.

He asserted there was no human being to whom he was under personal obligation for his appointment.

The captains were invited to met Commissioner O'Meara in his offices at Police Headquarters at 10 o'clock to-day. All were there. The new commissioner said, in part:

City's Interest First.

"I have always believed that, in a purely executive position, one which required no representation of parties, one good second-rate man would, in the long run be better than three first-rate men. On that theory I build such hope as I have for the success of my administration. Whether I stay here five weeks, or five years, as the term implies, I shall have but one supreme interest, the interest of the people of Boston. Next to that, even an essential part of it, will be the interest of the police department of Boston. But the city, if you please, comes first. And then, after the police department as a whole, will come, in my mind, the rights, the interest, the happiness, the comfort of the individual members of the department.

"I have always believed and practiced the belief that labor should be made as light and agreeable as possible for a man without detracting from the highest possible performance of his duty; that there should be no needless labor, but that for the full and complete performance of the imperative duty, day or night—day and night, if necessary—mercy should begin only where strength failed. This theory I have practiced as well as applied. You will, therefore, know that if the emergencies of the city require that you be overworked it will not happen through ignorance or inhumanity, or under an authority which itself knows nothing of hard work.

Jealousies in Department.

"This is the department especially charged with the preservation of the law. But I find in your own manual a very good maxim—old enough to be well proved, yet new enough to be repeated—that the man who wishes to command must first observe the laws which should govern himself.

"I mean now the admirable rules and regulations of this department, and I am sorry to say that there are some of those rules which are violated publicly every hour of the day by member of this department. I do not allude to great rules involving moral obloquy, but all rules are important. On this point I shall communicate with you in other ways and at other times.

"I have been told—much less than my opportunities for hearing, because I do not care to hear—that there are cliques and jealousies in this department. Of course there are. There are cliques and jealousies wherever one man's ambition come in conflict with another's. This would be a poor department if the positions held by all the superior officers from sergeant upwards could not be filled again and again from the department itself.

Won't Have Personal Quarrels.

"It is in the nature of things that in activities of this kind, the number of opportunities for advancement should be far smaller than the number of candidates who are properly equipped for advancement. That is the excusable ground for the existence of rivalries, and of such rivalries I have nothing to say. But when they degenerate, if they ever do, into jealousy and personal quarrels hurtful to the department's business, the case is different.

"I say now, harshly perhaps, but with deliberate meaning and purpose, that if such a condition should disclose itself, and if it exists it will be disclosed, I will deal with it without the smallest regard for individual interests. If there be a guilty man and an innocent man, the guilty man will go. If it be impossible to determine the guilt on one side or the other, both will go. There will be no such thing in this department as a man walking around another, taking a long course when a short one is open merely because there is somebody in the way with whom he has quarrelled. This is meant for every member of the department, from the superintendent down to the latest recruit.

"There will be many opportunities of seeing you, and I shall take up now no further topics.

To Call at Stations.

"I am obliged to you for making this call. I shall return your calls individually at your official homes. I shall go as a responsible official calling upon a subordinate on business.

"I shall not necessarily tell you that I am coming, neither shall I conceal the intention. If I call at 1 o'clock in the afternoon or 1 in the morning, I am sure it will be all the same to you, because I do not doubt that your houses are always in order and always will be.

"There is no human being to whom I am under personal obligation for this position. I am here solely on such merits as the appointing power discovered, or thought it discovered, in me; and those merits, whatever they may be, will never be blemished by a lack of independence or of fairness to you all, or by a diminution of the ambition I now cherish that this department shall be not only the best possible under the conditions, but so recognized by the people, who are our masters. I ask your help to that end."

Between Midnight and One O'Clock the Hour of Death

THE four persons who have been electrocuted in Charlestown State Prison were put to death between midnight and 1 o'clock in the morning, and it is believed that Tucker will die at the same hour Monday. Here is the time of the previous executions:

John Best, September 9, 1902, 12:22 a. m.
John B. Cassels, May 6, 1902, 12:40 a. m.
Francis Zek Umilian, December 24, 1901, 12:20 a. m.
Luigi Storti, December 17, 1901, 12:29 a. m.

JURY FINDS BORGES GUILTY ON 74 COUNTS

BORGES'S POSSIBLE SENTENCE 219 YEARS.

COUNT.	CHARGE.	VERDICT.	POSSIBLE SENTENCE.
No. 1............	Conspiracy.	Disagreement.	....
No. 2............	Conspiracy.	Guilty.	3 years.
Nos. 3 to 55......	Larceny.	Disagreement.	....
Nos. 56 to 128....	Larceny.	Guilty.	216 years.
		Total sentence possible,	219 years.

Ferdinand E. Borges, the Ubero promoter, was found guilty by the Superior Court jury to-day on the seventy-three counts of larceny and one count of conspiracy. On one count of conspiracy and fifty-three counts of larceny the jury disagreed. The jury returned its verdict at 9:45, after being out all night. The law provides a penalty of three years for conspiracy and a maximum penalty of five years for larceny. On this basis it is possible for Judge White to sentence Borges to 219 years, according to the amounts of money secured.

The jury sent in word at 9 o'clock that it could not agree, and was told by the Court, after consultation with the attorneys for the State and for the defence, to report, as no second trial would be held on any counts on which the jury disagreed, providing it had agreed on others.

Borges was charged with 128 counts in all. The first two were of conspiracy in connection with the formation of the defunct Consolidated Ubero Plantations Company. The remaining 126 were of larceny in the same connection.

The jury reported disagreement on the first conspiracy count and Borges looked cheerful. It reported guilty on the second conspiracy count and Borges's jaw dropped. Disagreement was returned on counts 3 to 54 of larceny, but on counts 55 to 128 of larceny the verdict was guilty.

Of the larceny charges of which Borges was found guilty, those numbered 56 to 100 were of larceny from E. O. Childs of Newton, numbers 101 to 124 of larceny from John Landers, and 125 to 128 of larceny from Warren B. Page.

Judge White thanked the jury for its difficult and painstaking work and then dismissed it.

Borges will not be sentenced probably until June 21, until which time his counsel has the right to file exceptions with the court.

Mrs. Borges was in court when sentence was announced, seated in front of the prisoner's cage. At the announcement of her husband's guilt on several counts she tried hard to conceal her emotion, and was plainly far more affected than the prisoner, who outwardly maintained his usual composure.

Attorney Chase, who was specially engaged by the District Attorney to try the case, said after the verdict: "I am entirely satisfied with the outcome."

Both Parents Overcome by Emotion After Parting With Boy Condemned to Die for Murder of Mabel Page—Vahey Asks for Reprieve for One Month.

Overcome by grief, both Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Tucker fainted to-day after leaving the "death house" in Charlestown State Prison, where their son, Charles Louis Tucker, will probably die in the electric chair soon after midnight to-morrow night for the murder of Mabel Page. The meeting of parents and son to-day was probably their last.

Mrs. Lucy A. Tucker, the sad-faced mother, who has borne up so bravely through the fearful ordeal, sank into unconsciousness just as she emerged from the prison into the prison yard.

The father's strength held out a little longer. After his wife was revived they started on their way.

But Mr. Tucker fainted in the public street, he, too, overcome by the horror of his son's impending death.

Mother of Tucker Prays for Reprieve, Even a Day.

We are praying that there may still be some small ray of hope for our dear boy, possibly a reprieve. How long does a reprieve extend? As long as the Governor chooses to extend it, I suppose.

I do pray so hard that even this small comfort will be granted. A day to our dear son is almost a life now. Oh, the time is so short. And I don't know where it will end.—Mrs. Lucy Tucker in statement to Boston American.

Later, when her strength had returned a little, Mrs. Tucker gave voice to the agony which afflicts her. She intimates plainly that the execution of her son will probably cause the death of his father and mother.

With tears streaming down her cheeks, she said:

"I fear we shall not be allowed to see him again, not in this world, though it may not be long before one or both of us joins him in the next."

Again she said:

"It will mean the early death of my husband, perhaps of myself."

ASK MONTH'S REPRIEVE.

Tucker is awaiting—with a hope that refuses to be abated—a reply to the letter sent by his counsel, Messrs. Vahey, Innes and Mansfield, to Governor Guild to-day, asking for a reprieve for a month.

Throughout the meeting with his parents Tucker displayed wonderful self-command. Mother, father and son were together from 10:30 to 11:30. The mother tried to utter words of cheer, but it was rather the son who comforted the mother, if comfort were possible.

As the father and mother came out of the death house Mrs. Tucker tottered and fell into her husband's arms. When she recovered consciousness she broke down and wept pitifully.

The husband tried to speak words of hope, but he was hardly equal to the effort, and it was not long, as the two were coming back into the city, before he also succumbed to the strain and fainted.

A statement was later given out by Mrs. Tucker concerning the meeting with her son. She said:

"PROBABLY LAST TIME."

"We visited our poor dear son Louis today, Mr. Tucker and I, and it may be for the last time, though that seems incredible, as if it could not be.

"That the hand of man should be permitted to separate us from him, a beloved son whom we know to be innocent of the crime, seems past belief. I fear we shall not be allowed to see him again. Not in this world, though it may not be long before one or both of us join him in the next.

"You say we have borne up bravely, and others tell us so. I fear we can bear it not much longer.

"My dear husband and I came to the city this morning hoping, at least, that a reprieve would be granted.

"It is hard of the Governor to refuse us everything.

Poor Louis said:

"OUR HEARTS BREAKING."

"Good-bye, mamma and papa, I will see you again. But he turned his head away, and we know what he meant. It will be in the hereafter, I fear, and he really meant that, but would not give up in front of us. So he made believe that he expected us to call again. Our hearts are indeed breaking now, but perhaps, as I said before, it will not be so very long before poor Louis and his papa and mamma will indeed meet again where men cannot separate us.

"They say I well nigh fainted at the prison. Perhaps I did. My husband was overcome upon the street when we separated, he to go home at once and me to gather the few essential things for the awful coming days. They will all be black things. Everything is black now, you know. The sun and the sky are black. Once the world was bright enough, the same as it is to other people.

"We will have the poor boy's body, and with a few simple services at the house will take it to Worcester for interment. The details are not arranged now. Walter is attending to them and taking all the care from our shoulders that he can—good son that he is.

THROUGH MANY TRIALS.

"To think we have seen him for the last time on earth alive is hard, very hard indeed. At our age we have passed through many trials, as every one has to in this world, but as the hand of fate occasionally descends with unusual severity, so it has fallen upon us and there is no alternative but to bow our heads.

"It has fallen at a time when my dear husband can illy sustain the shock, for his health is very bad. I don't know about mine. I have not had time to observe, and now I do not care. It will mean the early death of my husband—perhaps of myself.

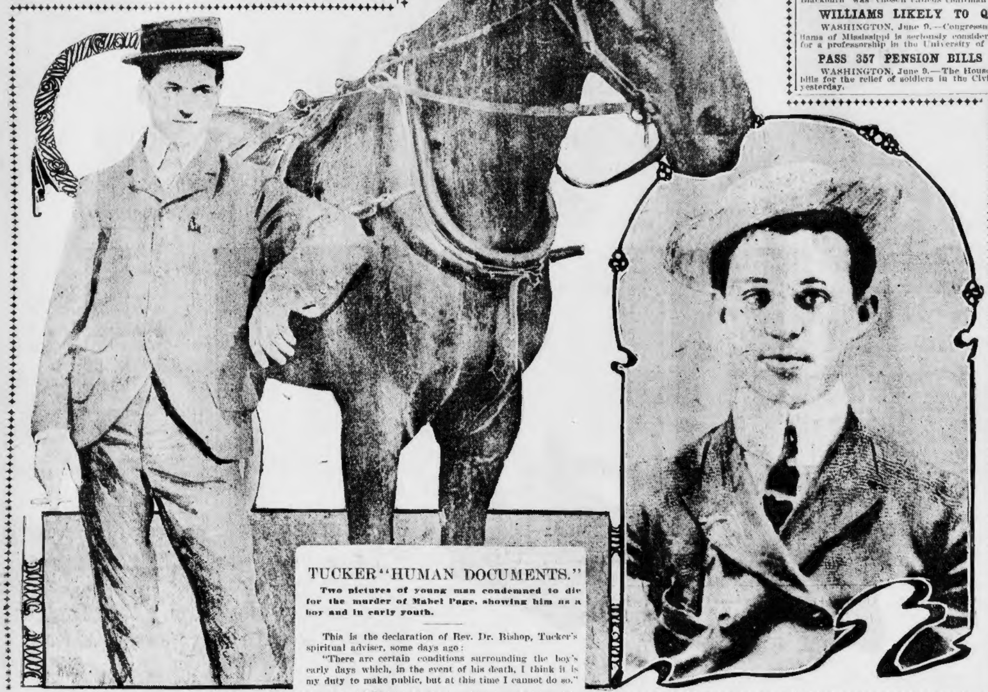
"Poor Louis was waiting at his cell door with the customary greeting. To a stranger he would have seemed no different than upon other visits, but we could see the difference. His face was haggard and drawn, although with masterful courage he met us with a smile upon his lips.

"'Hello, mamma and papa. You have come again. I am so glad.'



TUCKER "HUMAN DOCUMENTS."

Two pictures of young man condemned to die for the murder of Mabel Page, showing him as a boy and in early youth.

This is the declaration of Rev. Dr. Bishop, Tucker's spiritual adviser, some days ago:

"There are certain conditions surrounding the boy's early days which, in the event of his death, I think it is my duty to make public, but at this time I cannot do so."

"Louis had been writing a letter to Lawyer Vahey, but laid it aside when we were announced. His wonderful self-control surely had the desired effect upon us. Why, the poor boy smiled many times during our visit, and several times repeated his old-time encouraging words, that we must not worry or give way.

"I AM WITHOUT GUILT."

"Quickly he assured us that he slep and ate well, and that he would hope on to the very end, and that we must also. He said:

"'I was so pleased with the story in the BOSTO NAMERICAN. It looked better in print than in writing and it was the truth. It expressed what I had to say even beter than I thought it would. The world will not believe me guilty, will it? I am certainly without guilt in this awful matter, no matter what our enemies may say.'

We did most of the talking, and explained to Louis in detail what was being done. Toward the close he interrupted, saying:

"'You remember, papa, the time I borrowed half a dollar from that friend of ours on the train—the time I came away without a ticket or money? I want you to do an errand for me. I have money in my own clothes hanging in a closet nearby. The guards will show you where it is. I want you to take half a dollar from the pocket and pay the young man. You know I haven't had a very good chance to do it myself. It may be (and he smiled sadly ofr just an instant) the last chance I shall have to return it, and I want to be square with everybody if anything happens.'

ARRANGING FOR FUNERAL.

"Louis spoke feelingly of Mr. Winslow and the numerous other who have been so kind to us, and had a few suggestions to make on matters only interesting to those of his immediate family.

"I suppose we may not be allowed to see poor Louis to-morrow. I would walk over the roadway of stones the whole distance from our home to see him only for a moment more, but it is the law and the rule of the prison perhaps. I can hardly remember just what we were told about it, my head was in a whirl. If it should be that we can go to-morrow I hope we will be notified. I also want to see Mr. Winslow very badly, and would be so glad if he would call at the house as quickly as his duties will permit. It—is—about the funeral services. You can understand. We shall hold simple services at the house before going to Worcester. The day is not fixed as yet. Good-by. Yes, we are endeavoring to keep up, trying to eat and sleep—at least a little while. We thank the BOSTON AMERICAN and the very many dear people who have sympathized with us.

"They keep coming to mind and their faces seem to pass before me, and it makes me feel a little more resigned. I passed down the street to-day where I used to buy dainties to take to poor Louis on my visits to him. I looked in the windows at the very things I used to buy for him, and they seemed almost to speak to me. If I can do no more for dear Louis, I will continue to do my best for the others here. I cannot tell you any more to-day. here. I cannot tell you any more to-day."

The letter from Tucker to Governor Guild, asking for a reprieve, was sent to the State House at 11:15 by a messenger boy. About the time that it started from the office of the lawyers the Governor left the State House. He did not receive the letter. Where His Excellency went his secretary would not tell. He would not admit even that the letter has been received.

Those who have studied the Governor's course in the Tucker case do not believe that he will grant the reprieve asked.

LETTER ASKING REPRIEVE.

Here is the letter that was sent to the Governor:

"To His Excellency, Curtis Guild, Jr., Governor of Massachusetts:

Dear Sir—Your refusal to refer the petition for the commutation of the sentence of Charles L. Tucker to the Executive Council concludes that aspect of the case.

In view, however, of the importance of the issue and the short time intervening between your decision and the date set for the execution, we request you to grant the prisoner a respite of a month in order that everything possible may be done for him.

We are constantly receiving information and suggestions, and it is possible that within a short time the truth may be revealed.

No harm can result in granting this request, and it may be that the greatest good will come fro mit. Yours respectfully, VAHEY, INNES & MANSFIELD.

TUCKER WAS CALM.

James H. Vahey, shortly after the parents of Tucker left, went in to see Tucker. He remained fifteen minutes. Mr. Vahey told Tucker about the letter to the Governor asking for a reprieve. Tucker was hopeful. Mr. Vahey said, that the request would be granted.

With death so near—only a few hours off, it is believed—Tucker shows no signs of breaking down or of confessing.

"I have nothing to confess. I swear I did not kill Mabel Page."

This is the declaration Tucker made in the death cell. The chair in which he is doomed to die stands within fifteen feet of the young man, in readiness for its grim mission.

Tucker slept well last night and ate his usual hearty breakfast to-day. He asked for the newspapers and read them with great interest. He was particularly interested in the Faneuil Hall mass meeting that is to be held this evening in his behalf.

WON'T ADMIT WINSLOW.

It was reported that Tucker had decided that he wished the Rev. W. C. Winslow to act as his spiritual adviser instead of the Rev. Thomas W. Bishop. Warden Bridges said to-day that Tucker had not made any such request, and that if Mr. Winslow came to the jail he would not be admitted, because, the warden said, he had been a trouble maker in connection with the fight to save Tucker.

"I see that the Rev. Mr. Winslow is down to speak at Faneuil Hall to-night on the Tucker matter. I am here to uphold the dignity of the State, and I do not propose to admit a man who is against the Governor."

Philip Mansfield of the law firm of Vahey, Innes & Mansfield, Tucker's lawyers, said to-day that James H. Vahey is firmly convinced in his own mind of the innocence of Tucker and that he charges himself with the responsibility of his having been condemned to death.

A. F. Tucker, the father of the condemned young man had the following conversation with Warden Bridges:

"If he must die, when will it be done?" asked the father.

"Mr. Tucker, I am sorry, but the law requires me to keep that secret," answered the warden.

"Can we see him again?" asked Mr. Tucker.

"Yes, any time you wish to come during the day I will be glad to do anything I can for you," said General Bridges.

ASKS FOR THE BODY.

"Can we come to-morrow?

"Yes."

"Warden, if the worst happens, can we have the body?" asked Mr. Tucker, with lips trembling with emotion.

"Yes," said General Bridges. "I will telephone you as soon as it is over, and you may send for his body."

It is declared that Tucker was very angry when he had an opportunity to read Governor Guild's decision against him.

"Governor Guild is unjust," he said. "He condemns me harshly without provocation. He picks out here and there bits of evidence, and upon them says I am guilty, without mentioning the great collection of testimony which contradicts the other.

"The Governor will not be convinced that I am innocent."

It is believed that there are only two things that would warrant Governor Guild stepping in to interfere with the death sentence at this time.

These two things would be a confession by another person, or a confession by Tucker in which he could name a second person as an accomplice in the murder. Even then the latter might not be effective, unless the confession was easily and quickly susceptible of proof which would warrant further probe into the crime.

As an added precaution to all those that have been taken during Tucker's stay in the death cell, the death watch was last night doubled, and will remain so from now on to the time of the execution.

Two men will sit within three feettt of the door of the death cell, and will watch Tucker's every movement. Close beside them a telephone has been installed, connected with the Warden's office. Through this the guards will report every half hour to the Warden. Unless something arises, their only report will be "All's well." An extra guard will also be kept on hand to assist or relieve theo thers, in case of any emergency.

Further precautions have been taken outside the jail to guard from cranks or any attempt that might be made to rescue the prisoner. Three policemen from the City Square station in Charlestown were last night detailed to duty at the state prison.

SANFORD'S GINGER CURES COLDS. Cramps, pains, chills, prevents grip, promotes sleep, and is always health. Get the genuine.

Edward Page Said Tucker Would Confess; His Counsel Says "No"

It is my belief that Tucker will eventually confess to the crime of which he has been found guilty. I believe that when he realizes that death faces him he will tell the truth.

I feel sorry for Tucker's parents. The blow that has fallen upon the stricken father is a severe one. He and the devoted mother have my sympathy.—Statement of Edward Page, when Tucker was convicted.

There will be no confession. It is preposterous to think of such a thing. I am fully convinced of this boy's innocence of the crime for which he must die.

I cannot too strongly condemn any suggestion that there has been an attempt to prevent Tucker from confessing. It would be for my peace of mind if Tucker should say that he is guilty, if such be the fact.—James H. Vahey, Tucker's counsel.

STRAIN PROVES TOO MUCH FOR REV. MR. BISHOP

Anxiety for the spiritual welfare of Charles Louis Tucker and the mental worry entailed in acting as his spiritual adviser has so worked on the nerves of the Rev. Thomas W. Bishop that at his home to-day it was declared he was unable to see any one.

It was said that he could not go to the Charlestown State Prison to-day and nothing about his further action in connection with Tucker, who has but a few hours to live, could be learned at the house.

BERNHARDT HERE FOR HER REALFAREWELLS

Sarah Bernhardt returned to Boston today for her real farewell performance, after playing "Camille" in a circus tent at Springfield and in an armory at Hartford, Ct., Friday afternoon and evening. The Theatrical Trust forced her to adopt these novel methods because they refused to grant her the use of a theatre, although in Springfield two of the Trust houses are closed.

Bernhardt played "Camille" at the Boston Theatre this afternoon, and the bill announced for the final performance to-night is a composite one, the second act of "L'Aiglon," second act of "Frou-Frou," third act of "Hamlet" and the fourth act of "La Sorciere."

In her portrayal of "Camille" at the matinee to-day, Bernhardt's reflection of the spirit and abandon of youth, with its undercurrent of seriousness, its note of impending sadness, was the highest example of dramatic art. Age, she is now sixty-two, has caused her to pitch the emotional key lower and to make Camille more humanly possible.

She no longer tears passion to bits, but accentuates her intense grief. One forgets that she is acting, so perfect is her illusion. Above all, she makes it plain that a woman of the under world can experience a sure and honest love.

The Boston Theatre was packed full of people who realized that this was the last opportunity to see the world's greatest actress in her masterpiece, and not only was there enthusiasm without measure, but the performance was delayed by the repeated curtain calls.

Before the inspectors were detailed at the terminal the thefts used to be more numerous in the afternoon and early evening rush hours. This time the enterprising thief was ahead of the police.

Mrs. Cassidy, in reporting her loss to the police, said that she came over with her son to deposit the money in a bank. WITH SON ON BRINK OF DEATH, MRS. TUCKER STILL HOPES FOR HIS LIFE

BELIEVES GOVERNOR WILL GRANT A REPRIEVE

Brave Little Woman, in the Face of Most Heart-Breaking Situation, Is Still Held Up By Her Old and Unconquerable Courage.

By Eleanor Ames.

HOPE has not died in Mrs. Lucy Tucker's heart, although probably not more than forty-eight hours of life remain for her unfortunate son.

When I saw her at her home last night, after she had visited Louis, she talked with reasonable confidence of the possibility of a reprieve.

"You know the Governor is the only one who can grant a reprieve?" I suggested.

"Yes, but I believe he will be willing to do it. Why, I cannot believe that this is the end. I am sure there is something back of all this and that some other way will be discovered to spare Louis a little longer."

The incipient collapse of the night before had passed and left this remarkable woman unnaturally calm.

Her eyes were dry, though the marks of tears were still visible; she talked without excitement, she even smiled.

Inherits Splendid Nerve.

We have heard much of the superb nerve of Charles Tucker.

He comes by it honestly. It is an inheritance from his mother.

In my life I have seen many brave women, whose courage in time of greatest need was beyond the comprehension of the average mortal, but never have I seen or heard or even dreamed of such absolute unconquerable, unquenchable courage as that which Mrs. Tucker possesses.

Does she realize the pitiful shortness of time? She does not betray it.

Does she know that perhaps only once more, at the most, not more than twice will she have a chance to look upon the living face of her first born, her much beloved son? She gives no sign of it.

In the face of the most soul-tearing, heart-breaking, situation in which a mother could be placed, she pursues the accustomed duties of her life, and hope rises triumphant.

Her Wonderful Courage.

It is simply marvelous. It is more, it is staggering. I find myself unable to cope with so wonderful a character or the fathom its depths.

Take the case home to yourself?

Try to put yourself in Charles Tucker's place. Would you know the meaning of composure?

Could you eat, or sleep, or talk, or even think?

Wouldn't you be dying a thousand deaths every minute?

Then try to imagine your own mother in the position of one whose child has been declared guilty of the most fearful of crimes and condemned past all help to death.

Ah! the thought overpowers you, doesn't it? You see your mother a hopeless maniac, a heartbroken, mindless creature, whose greatest blessing is her mental oblivion.

And in the comparison, Mrs. Tucker seems all the more wonderful.

"Then God Pity Her!"

It is this present calm which makes this poor mother's future all the more tragic.

For when the blow falls and the strength fails—as fall it must—then may God pity her!

Yet in the midst of the hope-inspired calm there come occasional flashes which reveal the facts that are persistent in their assertiveness.

Once or twice Mrs. Tucker referred to "when Louis comes home," and once she spoke of wanting the house "in perfect order for the funeral," and again made reference to the family burial lot in Worcester.

Then with heroic courage she apologized for the thought by saying: "In case of the worst, we must be prepared. But I still believe something must be done to save him."

The entire Tucker family visited Louis yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Tucker, Walter Tucker and his wife, and Mrs. Tucker's sister, Mrs. Adam Horle.

He tried to appear cheerful as he talked to them, and protested his innocence and regretted that he could not have proved it.

Bowed by Sorrow.

"If I have to die I die innocent," he said. "You all know that, and it must be a comfort to you."

The sorrow of the present crisis is telling strongly on Mr. Tucker and Walter.

Both have the appearance of being in great physical pain. Neither has much to say.

With feeble steps and bent head the father, good, true, honest man that he is, goes back and forth to his work at the Riverside station with smileless face and hollow eyes, and the brother continues his duties as a brakeman.

Both are suffering a sorrow too keen for tears, too sacred for words.

And both are unconsciously depending largely for consolation upon the slight little woman who possesses a will of iron and a lion-like courage, and who, seeing the shadow of death peeping over her son's shoulder, still says:

"I have hope."

All the pity that human heart can contain should be poured forth upon the parents and brother of Charles Louis Tucker.

It is hard for Tucker to die.

It is harder for the others to live.

How a Mother's Face looks When she Goes to tell Her son he Must die A felon's Death.

Mrs. Tucker, photographed yesterday on her way to Charlestown prison.

"NO CONFESSION," DECLARES VAHEY

Charles L. Tucker has not given the slightest hint of any intention to make a confession. To the contrary, he still insists that he is innocent of any knowledge of the murder of Mabel Page.

The suggestion that James H. Vahey, his counsel, had used his influence over Tucker to suppress any attempt at a confession was met with an indignant denial by all the members of that law firm.

"There will be no confession," said Mr. Vahey. "It is preposterous even to think of such a thing, in my opinion, so utterly immovable is my conviction of his innocence of this crime for which he must suffer death.

"Tucker declared to me, when I broke the news to him of Governor Guild's refusal to commute his sentence, that he would go to the chair an innocent man, and I believe he is telling the truth.

Realizes Gravity of Situation.

"He realizes fully the gravity of his situation and for months had reflected upon the possibility of such a condition finally being present.

"I have never seen a greater change in any young man in the two years and over since his arrest. From a light-hearted, careless boy, he has developed into a serious minded young man, with knowledge of the deeper things in life.

"It is a mischievous falsehood to declare that in these trying times he spends his time reading dime novels. He has given much reflection to spiritual matters and his future welfare. One could not help being impressed by the serious and responsible way in which he expresses his views."

"It is absolutely and unqualifiedly false and malicious," said Mr. Mansfield in discussing the matter last night. "I have been working with Mr. Vahey in a subordinate capacity for some two years, during which time I have been constantly engaged on this case, and I know perhaps as well as anybody else in this office the tremendous effect it has had upon him. When the verdict was reached, Mr. Vahey suffered as much as the defendant did, and from that time until the present he has never wavered in his absolute belief in Tucker's innocence.

No Attempt to Suppress.

"Under these circumstances, considering all that he has suffered and the devotion with which he has worked, night and day, I brand it as an absolute outrage upon him even to suggest that he has suppressed or attempted to suppress any confession on the part of Tucker. Everybody in this office, I think, would be glad for Mr. Vahey's sake if Tucker should admit that he was guilty, if he is, before going to the chair."

Tucker had several visitors yesterday. Besides his counsel, he talked yesterday with his mother and father, his aunt, Mrs. Adam Horle; his brother, Walter Tucker, and his wife; Chaplain Barnes, and his spiritual adviser, the Rev. Thomas W. Bishop of Auburndale.

Dr. Bishop saw him shortly after 3 o'clock and remained with him about twenty minutes. Tucker seemed pleased to see him and talked with him about the case. He also expressed his desire that Mr. Bishop should continue as his spiritual adviser, although it is understood that his mother sought to have the Rev. William Copley Winslow to act in that capacity.

Dr. Bishop His Adviser.

It was necesary, however, to consult the warden before any change could be made. He said he would be satisfied with any spiritual adviser who would be agreeable to Tucker. The result was that Dr. Bishop will visit him to-day and to-morrow, unless something comes up in the mean time to cause him to change his mind.

After the second visit from Attorney Vahey late in the afternoon there were no more callers to see Tucker. With the night watchman, Daniel McMillan, Tucker is locked in the execution building and one is just as much a prisoner as the other for the night, except that the guard can telephone to the prison office if anything goes wrong. In that way and that only any intelligence can be communicated and it would be necessary to get the key and open the door from the outside if any ocasion for changing the guard or entering the building should arise.

ELECTRIC CHAIR IS READY FOR TUCKER

Warden Benjamin F. Bridges of the Charlestown State Prison has the electric chair ready for the execution of Charles L. Tucker. The straps have been adjusted and the wires that are to supply the death-dealing current have been tested.

The sentence of the court was that Tucker should die in the week beginning June 10. That date begins after midnight to-night. It is within the warden's discretion to set the exact time for the electrocution, except that it must be between midnight and daylight.

Precedent indicates that Tucker will die a few minutes after midnight to-morrow night. Here are those who will attend the execution:

1. Warden Bridges.
2. Deputy Allen.
3. Prison guard.
4. Second guard.
5. Surgeon General Devine.
6. Medical Examiner McDonald.
7. State Prison Surgeon Dr. J. L. McLaughlin.
8. Condemned man's clergyman, the Rev. William H. Bishop.
9. Newspaper representative.

OUSTED POLICE BOARD APPEALS

Laforest E. eBals, Frank B. Dow and Fisher H. Pearson, who were removed from office as police commissioners by Mayor Casey of Lowell last month, filed exceptions to-day in the Middlesex Superior Court to Judge Hitchcock's ruling, which sustained the action of the Mayor.

"Realizing That I Must Die, I Have Nothing to Confess."

I have nothing to confess. I can never truthfully say that I had any connection with the murder of Mabel Page. I shall never make a confession of guilt to any man, because I am innocent. I swear that I did not kill Mabel Page. A man confesses when all hope has gone because he is guilty, but I, realizing that I must die in the electric chair, say I am innocent.

I have spent many long hours considering what might happen if it were decided that I must be electrocuted. I have spent many hours thinking over religious subjects. At this time, knowing that religion is a great comfort, and knowing that without truth there can be no religious feeling, I say that I cannot make a confession, for I am innocent.—Tucker's statement from death cell.

TUCKER PROTEST MEETING TO-NIGHT

A mass meeting will be called in Faneuil Hall at 8 o'clock to-night to protest against Governor Guild's action in refusing to commute the sentence of Charles Louis Tucker.

Captain Gaskin of Station 2 will be present with four policemen to preserve order. William Peel of No. 10½ Common street, South End, applied and received yesterday the license for the use of the hall. It was asked for "a public meeting to be held under the auspices of the Citizens' League of Boston." The purpose of the meeting stated was to discuss political and judicial methods affecting the State.

Mr. Peel has figured several times in the Tucker case. He wrote a letter to Governor Guild asking for a commutation of the sentence of the condemned young man, and received a reply from the Governor that the latter would carefully consider everything before making a decision.

Together with Frank X. Turcott and James A. Kemp, as representatives of the "Citizens League of Boston," he applied for the hall. The promoters of the meeting declare that resolutions will be adopted protesting against the Governor's action and asking him for further consideration. These resolutionst will be presented to him either to-night or to-morrow.

12,000 MARCH AS PROTEST

LONDON, June 9.—Twelve thousand Lancashire churchmen paraded the streets here in an organized protest against the education bill. The procession was headed by the Bishops of London and Manchester and included many clergy. At a mass meeting these paraders adopted an emphatic protest against the bill, on the ground that it is destructive of all forms of religious instruction in the elementary schools, and asserted that the only true safeguard of religious education in the schools is a continuation of the denominational schools.

NAVY TO TEST OIL FOR FUEL

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The navy department has decided to make an exhaustive investigation of oil as a possible fuel for ships of war, a subject which has been under consideration by the naval board on construction for several weeks. It is proposed to use the Wyoming in practical demonstration of the burning of oil in place of coal, and arrangements have been made for fitting out that vessel at Mare Island for that purpose.

Naval constructors have designed the means of storing the oil and the bureau of steam engineering has drawn the plans for pumps and the burning apparatus.

ONTARIO CYCLONE DEAD PUT AT OVER SCORE

DETROIT, June 9.—Today's reports of the most terrific clclone in the history of the Great Lakes, which swept Ontario yesterday, place the death list at over a score, in addition to hundreds of seriously injured. The property loss will reach into the millions.

Lake Erie, Lake Huron and Lake Ontario all experienced the full fury of the storm, and great loss to shipping and to life on the lakes is feared.

A short dispatch from Hamilton reports the loss of nine lives at Chatham that are known and says that the town is filled with rumors of many killed.

An immense crowd at the Hamilton races were caught in the full fury of the storm in the grandstand and paddock.

That the people were crowded together was all that saved scores probably from death. They were blown to the ground and lay there hugging the earth, clinging desperately against the force of the raging wind, while the rain covered them with floods.

For fully twenty minutes the wind roared past at a speed of eighty miles an hour, and in the twenty minutes nearly four inches of rain fell.

Eight persons lost their lives at a Summer resort on the Detroit River near Wolfs. They were blown from the shore into the river and drowned. An eight-year-old boy was picked up by the wind at Wolfs and carried across the Belle Island bridge and drowned.

In Chatham the streets are filled with ruins and debris. Buildings were blown down, roofs were twisted off, hundreds of telephone and telegraph lines were broken and torn fro mthe poles.

The anniversary comes to-morrow, but the civic and private observance take place to-day. The days program is as follows:

1 p. m.—Yacht races in Dorchester Bay.

1 p. m.—Water sports at public pier, Freeport street.

2.30 p. m.—Parade starts.

2:30 p. m.—Dorchester Gentlemen's Driving Club races at Franklin Field speedway.

In the line were a detachment of coast artillery, marines from the navy yard, sailors from the warships, signal corps, M. V. M.; provisional regiment from Fifth, Sixth, Eighth and Ninth Regiments, M. V. M.; battalion from Massachusetts Naval Brigade, British Naval and Military Veterans, Boys' Brigade, battalion Dorchester letter carriers, Improved Order of Red Men, Knights of Pythias and invited guests.

The annual exhibit of the children's school and home gardens of the Horticultural Society is held to-day at Horticultural Hall.

CHEAPER GAS RAISES TRUST'S STOCK VALUES

Shares Jump Twenty-five Per Cent. as Consumers Get Cut Rate.

FURTHER REDUCTION DUE?

Reducing the price of gas to consumers from ninety cents to eighty-five per thousand cubic feet, the Boston Gas Trust has at the same time injected a new value of $13 into each share of the capital stock.

The day before the announcement of the reduction in price was made gas stock was selling for $50. The day after the announcement it was put up to $63.

The mere announcement of a reduction in price seems to have given the gas shares an increased value of twenty-five per cent.

The Gas Commissioners, especially General Morris Schaff, are extracting considerable comfort from the latest moves of the Gas Trust. The moves look to them like an admission that the company could have afforded the price reduction long ago, and was only waiting for the sliding scale gas act to go into effect before beginning a new game of stock watering.

Opposed Ten-Year Monopoly.

The commission opposed the sliding scale on the ground that the time had not come for its operation in this city under the present management of the gas company. General Schaff opposed on the further ground that it gives the trust a ten-year monopoly of the Boston field and takes from the people the right of petition and protest.

"I have all along claimed that the company could well afford to sell gas for 85 cents, yes, for 80 cents per thousand cubic feet and make a good profit, and now comes the gas company's confession that I was right," says General Schaff.

New Stock-Watering.

A member of the Legislature, commenting on the boosting of the Gas Trust stock, said: "Here is the real purpose of the sliding scale which Governor Guild was so anxious to sign. It develops a new and pretty game of stock-watering, and we have passed a bill to prevent that very thing. But, of course, the Gas Trust will be exempt. I think your newspaper should print every day in big type this question, 'What has made the Gas Trust stock so very valuable all of a sudden?'"

BAY STATE BOYS GET YALE HONORS

Proctor, Wakefield, Mass., gets a Berkeley premium, second grade, and W. R. Babcock gets the Hurlbut scholarship in the class of 1909.

BRINGS SECOND SUIT FOR BROKEN PROMISE

BENNINGTON, Vt., June 9.—Bennett & Graves, as attorneys for Oscarline C. M. Petersen of New York, have brought a second suit against H. C. Lindloff, for a number of years president of the Bennington Knitting Company, claiming breach of promise and placing damages at $2,000. The property of Lindliff has been attached.

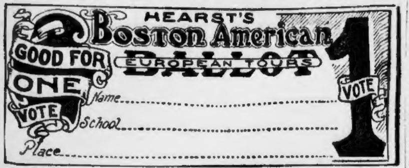
EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

MISS FARRINGTON UP IN THE WINNING LIST

This Ballot Counts One Vote.



Mail Votes to the European Tour Editor, P. O. Box 5131, Boston.

By one step, in one day, Miss Edith Farrington of Lowell yesterday joined the "winning list" of the Massachusetts Division in the European Tour Election and retired Miss Margaret F. G. Lee to the ranks of those standing in position of winners of cash "Consolation Prizes."

Miss Farrington scored an even 34,000 votes by Special Ballot orders for the delivery of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, and this sent her upward three points in the roster of Massachusetts candidates.

Heavy voting in certain quarters sent several candidates upward in the list.

Miss Annie T. Mellen of Worcester gained one step in the European Tour section, displacing Miss Nellie E. Carroll of East Bridgewater, who has made a remarkable campaign.

In the Greater Boston Division, Miss Madeline B. Driscoll of Roxbury passed above Miss Susan B. Gould of Everett, among those standing in position to capture one of the European Tours.

Miss Madeline Foppiano gained three points among the Shakespearian Tour winners. Outside the tour list of the Metropolitan Division, Miss Mary W. Burnett went above Miss Grace F. Gardner of the old Brimmer School.

There are now ONLY SEVENTEEN DAYS LEFT of the European Tour Election.

GIRLS START RIOT AFTER A BALL GAME

Scholars of Roger Wolcott and Dudley Schools in Free-for-All Fight.

Wrath of the girl supporters of the baseball team of the Roger Wolcott Grammar School of Dorchester at their schoolmates being defeated by the team from the Dudley School of Roxbury led to a clash between the players and other boys to the number of 200 at the corner of Tremont and Whittier streets to-day.

Willie Mulhall of Astoria street, Dorchester, was knocked out by a blow on the head from a stone. Other boys were cut and bruised, and in the melee even the girls were hustled and jostled roughly, before three policemen from the Roxbury Crossing station dispersed the youthful combatants.

The game was on the American League grounds, and Dudley School won, 9 to 3. The winning team and its friends started home, followed by the Wolcott School crowd, which had a dozen girls in its number, all waving school flags. The Wolcott girls jeered at the winners, taunting them with cheating. Some of the Dudley boys made a rush at the girls and tried to take away their flags.

The girls resisted vigorously. Then the Wolcott boys rushed to the girls' defence and there was a free-for-all fight in a minute. Stones flew, also several bottles which some of the boys found handy.

CURE FOR PIMPLES

INQUEST ON DEATH OF LENA M'DONALD

Witnesses Examined in Case of Girl Victim of Illegal Operation.

HAD WORKED IN BEVERLY

An inquest was held to-day in the Suffolk Law Courts building on the death of Miss Lena McDonald of No. 14 Faxon street, Roxbury, who died in the City Hospital on March 24 as the result of an illegal operation.

State Officer Neal examined the witnesses, and the hearing was closed at 1 o'clock.

Miss McDonald worked in a Beverly shoe shop, and after her death an autopsy was held by Medical Examiner MacDonald at the hospital. Before the girl's death she had admitted that she had undergone illegal treatment, but she persistently refused to mention any names.

Miss McDonald was twenty-three years old, pretty and the daughter of Mrs. Katherine MacDonald.

The case was taken up by the State police. George Dike, a young workman in the Garden City shoe factory in Beverly, called on the State police four days after the girl's death and was in their office an hour.

Dike was one of the witnesses examined to-day. Mrs. Katherine McDonald and Miss Mary McDonald, mother and sister of the dead girl, were there; also a Miss Kennison of Roxbury, one of her friends.

Miss Whiteman of Beverly, Miss McDonald's roommate in Beverly; Mrs. Spencer, her landlady, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur, Miss Conway, Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Burnham, friends of the girl in Beverly, were other witnesses. None of them would talk publicly.

SUES FOR $7,000 FOR DEATH.

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Simmons, widow of William J. Simmons, has begun suit against Renton, Whidden & Co. for $7,000, alleging that her husband's death was the result of being struck by a piece of machinery which fell from a derrick used by them in construction of a building.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS ARRIVE 40,000 STRONG

Disciples from Every Corner of the Globe Lovingly Salute Mrs. Eddy.

Forty thousand Christian Scientists from all quarters of the globe are here to-day for their annual convention and the dedicatory services of the new "Mother Church" in Falmouth street to-morrow.

In special trains the delegates continued to arrive to-day, most of them from New York city and Chicago.

The executive committee of the convention met in the Mother Church this morning and sent "loving and loyal greetings" to their "beloved leader and teacher," Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy.

"As the boundaries of our loved Mother Church are thus extended," they wrote to her, "so should our love for all mankind be enlarged, and thus show forth our greater appreciation of your unparalleled stand for and proof of the truth taught by Christ Jesus and revealed through you—the truth that heals the sick and saves the sinner.

"We find in the realization of this great healing and saving truth the real meaning of your life's work and of your continued active labor for mankind; and so we would emulate your example of good will to man in our increasing growth of love to God."

Rev. William P. McKenzie called the executive committee to order. In addition to the regular members present there were in attendance the following members:

The Right Hon. Charles Adolphus Murray, Earl of Dunmore, and the Countess of Dunmore of London, England; Lady Victoria Murray of Manchester, England; Professor Herman S. Hering of Concord, N. H.; Eugene H. Greene of Providence, R. I.; Rev. Severin E. Simonson of New Haven; Mrs. Effie Andrews of New York; Mrs. Emilie B. Hulin of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Henrietta B. Chaufrau of Philadelphia.

The meeting was strictly private, and the business transacted was for the spiritual interests of the church. After a session of two hours, which was reported to have been both interesting and profitable, the meeting adjourned.

Announcement was made to-day by the Christian Science Board of Directors that no further contributions for the building fund of the extension to the Mother Church would be necessary, as sufficient funds had been received for the completion of the church building. This action was taken by the directors on June 2, at which time it is evident that sufficient had been received.

A similar decision was reached and published at the time of the dedication of the Mother Church in 1895.

"All of which goes to show," said an enthusiast, "the earnestness and loyalty which Christian Scientists manifest in the support of their church work and which enables them to dedicate their churches free of debt almost without exception."

The estimated cost of the extension of the Mother Church, which will be dedicated at six services to-morrow, was $2,000,000. This amount was pledged by the members of the church in this city in 1893. All the contributions have been voluntary.

To-morrow's dedicatory services begin at 7:30 a. m., 10 a. m., 12:30 p. m., 3:05 p. m., 5:30 p. m. and 8 p. m.

A business meeting to which only members of the church will be admitted is to be held on Tuesday. Testimonial meetings will close the convention on Wednesday night.

Message of Greeting to Mary Baker G. Eddy

Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy.

Beloved Leader and Teacher—At this historic hour we, the executive members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, founded by you, send loving and loyal greetings.

Sitting under the shadow of a great prophecy fulfilled, we recognize that this Communion season particularly marks an epoch not only in the history of Christian Science, but also in the history of the world.

As the boundaries of our loved Mother Church are thus extended, so should our love for all mankind be enlarged, and thus show forth our greater appreciation of your unparalleled stand for and proof of the truth taught by Christ Jesus and revealed through you, the truth that heals the sick and saves the sinner.

We find in the realization of this great healing and saving truth the real meaning of your life's work; and of your continued active labor for mankind; and so we would emulate your example of good will to man in our increasing growth of love to God.

THE GREAT AUTO CHASE

CHAPTER LVI.

When Thieves Disagree.

CULBERSON was immediately interested.

"Oh, you saw them, eh?" he asked, "and where have they gone to?"

"They've gone to a place where me and you and Davis once did a very pretty piece of business, and that place is Winthrop."

"Winthrop?" repeated Culberson. "Are you sure?"

"Positive, certain," replied Hammond. "I made sure."

"Then I will go after them at once," declared Culberson. "Confound the loss of the auto. I suppose I must buy a new one. Are you going back to Davis to-night?"

"Betcherneck," replied Hammond.

"Then you and he must follow me. It will take me a day or two to get a car, so say you meet me at this place."

In the dim light Culberson scribbled something on a card and handed it to Hammond, who glanced at it and put it in his pocket.

"Between three and half-past, eh?" mused Hammond. "Anything else?"

"Nothing particularly."

"Well, now, why did I come all the way to this benighted spot? Do you think it was to save your precious carcass from Joe Morgan, or what?"

"I don't know," replied Culberson. "I don't know. But I am very glad you turned up so opportunely."

"Well, I'll just tell you," said Hammond, shaking his fist in the other man's face, "while you've been away slooking after your love affairs, me and Davis have had a kind of committee meeting and we've both come to the conclusion that you are not to be trusted."

"What do you mean?" asked Culberson, in alarm.

"I mean that instead of doing everything according to Hoyle, and trying to liquidate the glim and split the wad honest and without delay, you've been running us into dangers that we couldn't have known of and we wouldn't have been in if you hadn't dangled after a lot of skirts that don't do us no good."

"Well?" inquired Culberson, with a lift of his eyebrows.

"Well, we ain't going to stand no more of it," declared Hammond, decidedly. "I ain't educated like you and Davis and I've been content to let you carry the jewel, trusting to your superior learning to get rid of it and hand over the proceeds. But now I've got enough, and I demands that you hand over 'The Green Blaze' to me and Davis."

"What if I refuse?" asked Culberson, calmly.

"Well, it won't be healthy for you," replied Hammond fiercely. "I ain't a giant like Joe Morgan and I got a tender heart in me bosom, but what I says is this—give us the glim and do what you want to with your matrimonial projects."

"I see," mused Culberson, with a touch of sarcasm in his voice. "And what arrangements have you made as to my share of the proceeds when you have disposed of the diamond?"

"Now look here, Culberson," said Hammond, hotly. "That ain't right. We ain't interfered with you up to now, but you've made things considerable too hot for us, and not being Hottentots we can't stand for too much heat, so hand over and say no more about it."

"Do you take me for a fool?"

"I didn't used to, but now I have me doubts, so hand over."

"And what happens if I decline?"

"This!"

And before Culberson could defend himself Hammond seized him by the throat with startling suddenness and bent him backwards over his knee. Culberson struggled with all his strength, but the fingers never relaxed their grip.

Over and over they rolled upon the rickety floor, Culberson striking blindly at his antagonist and striving frantically to tear the grip from his windpipe. With his eyes bulging from their sockets he struggled, but in vain. Suddenly they crashed through the flooring to the room below. Both were knocked senseless.

Hammond was the first to recover his faculties. He glanced at his late antagonist.

WOMAN FLEES FROM CELL

Reaching through the bars of a cell in Police Station 1, East Cambridge, to-day, where she was locked up on a minor charge, Cecelia Cirigling, twenty-nine years old, of No. 117 Belmont street, Cambridge, took the matron's keys from a table, opened the cell door and let herself out. She walked out of the station house unnoticed and has not yet been found.

THE JUNGLE

BY UPTON SINCLAIR.

SYNOPSIS.

THE story of "The Jungle," Upton Sinclair's novel, which has caused the government investigation into the methods employed by the Beef Trust, has its origin in an actual Packingtown romance.

In Ashland avenue—"back of the stock yards"—the wedding took place. The first chapter merely shows a broad-shouldered butcher being wedded to a young girl who sees in him a hero. The wedding in all its grotesqueness is described in this chapter. The wedding ceremony is typical of Packingtown. It ends at dawn, when Jurgis and his bride, Ona, depart, sadly realizing that the contributions, which are a feature of the feast, will not nearly be [illegible] the expense of the ceremony.

Practically penniless, Jurgis tells his bride she shall not return to work in the packing house—he will work early and late. He could not work harder, but the thought of seeing her contribute toward their support was abhorrent to him.

On arriving in Chicago, J. Szedvilas, a Lithuanian, who ran a delicatessen store in Packingtown, guided Jurgis, Ona, Marija and the remainder of the party through the stock yards, after he had given them lodging. In this section of the story the author reveals some of the things that have startled the country.

He tells how a government inspector, typical of his kind, sits at the door of the freezing room and feels the glands of the cattle for tuberculosis—but if one conversed with the inspector and heard interesting things about cattle disease, the official would let a dozen bodies pass him without investigation. The method of preparation of meat is vividly portrayed in this instalment, and even the simple-minded children of nature from Lithuania revolt against the conditions described and witnessed daily in the contaminated precincts of Packingtown.

CHAPTER IV.

Copyright, 1906, by Doubleday, Page & Co. All rights reserved.

PROMPTLY at 7 the next morning Jurgis reported for work. He came to the door that had been pointed out to him, and there he waited for nearly two hours. The boss had meant for him to enter, but had not said this, and so it was only when on his way out to hire another man that he came upon Jurgis. He gave him a good cursing, but as Jurgis did not understand a word of it he did not object.

He followed the boss, who showed him where to put his street clothes, and waited while he donned the working clothes he had bought in a second-hand shop and brought with him in a bundle; then he led him to the "killing beds."

The work which Jurgis was to do here was very simple, and it took him but a few minutes to learn it. He was provided with a stiff besom, such as is used by street sweepers, and it was his place to follow down the line the man who drew out the smoking entrails from the carcass of the steer; this mass was to be swept into a trap, which was then closed, so that no one might slip into it.

As Jurgis came in, the first cattle of the morning were just making their appearance; and so, with scarcely time to look about him, and none to speak to any one, he fell to work. It was a sweltering day in July, and the place ran with steaming hot blood—one waded in it on the floor. The stench was almost overpowering, but to Jurgis it was nothing.

His whole soul was dancing with joy—he was at work at last! He was at work and earning money! All day long he was figuring to himself. He was paid the fabulous sum of seventeen and a half cents an hour; and as it proved a rush day and he worked until nearly 7 o'clock in the evening, he went home to the family with the tidings that he had earned more than a dollar and a half in a single day!

MARIJA LUCKY, TOO.

At home, also there was more good news; so much of it at once that there was quite a celebration in Aniele's hall bedroom. Jonas had been to have an interview with the special policeman to whom Szedvilas had introduced him, and had been taken to see several of the bosses, with the result that one had promised him a job the beginning of the next week.

And then there was Marija Berczynskas, who, fired with jealousy by the success of Jurgis, had set out upon her own responsibility to get a place. Marija had nothing to take with her save her two brawny arms and the word "job," laboriously learned; but with these she had marched about Packingtown all day, entering every door where there were signs of activity.

Out of some she had been ordered with curses; but Marija was not afraid of man or devil, and asked every one she saw—visitors and strangers, or work-people like herself, and once or twice even high and lofty office personages, who stared at her as if they thought she was crazy.

In the end, however, she had reaped her reward. In one of the smaller plants she had stumbled upon a room where scores of women and girls were sitting at long tables preparing smoked beef in cans, and wandering through room after room Marija came at last to the place where the sealed cans were being painted and labelled, and here she had the good fortune to encounter the "forelady."

Marija did not understand then, as she was destined to understand later, what there was attractive to a "forelady" about the combination of a face full of boundless good nature and the muscles of a dray horse; but the woman had told her to come the next day and she would perhaps give her a chance to learn the trade of painting cans.

The painting of cans being skilled piece work, and paying as much as two dollars a day, Marija burst in upon the family with the yell of a Comanche Indian, and fell to capering about the room so as to frighten the baby almost into convulsions.

Better luck than all this could hardly have been hoped for; there was only one of them left to seek a place. Jurgis was determined that Teta Elzbieta should stay at home to keep house, and that Ona should help her.

He would not have Ona working—he was not that sort of a man, he said, and she was not that sort of a woman. It would be a strange thing if a man like him could not support the family, with the help of the board of Jonas and Marija. He would not even hear of letting the children go to work—there were schools here in America for children, Jurgis had heard, to which they could go for nothing.

That the priest would object to these schools was something of which he had as yet no idea, and for the present his mind was made up that the children of Teta Elzbieta should have as fair a chance as any other children.

The oldest of them, little Stanislovas, was but thirteen, and small for his age at that, and while the oldest son of Szedvilas was only twelve, and had worked for over a year at Jones's, Jurgis would have it that Stanislovas should learn to speak English and grow up to be a skilled man.

DREAM OF A HOME.

So there was only old Dede Antanas; Jurgis would have had him rest, too, but he was forced to acknowledge that this was not possible, and, besides, the old man would not hear it spoken of—it was his whim to insist that he was as lively as any boy. He had come to America as full of hope as the best of them; and now he was the chief problem that worried his son.

For every one that Jurgis spoke to assured him that it was a waste of time to seek employment for the old man in Packingtown. Szedvilas told him that the packers did not even keep the men who had grown old in their own service—to say nothing of taking on new ones.

And not only was it the rule here, it was the rule everywhere in America, so far as he knew. To satisfy Jurgis he had asked the policeman and brought back the message that the thing was not to be thought of. They had not told this to old Anthony, who had consequently spent the two days wandering about from one part of the yards to another and had now come home to hear about the triumph of the others, smiling bravely and saying that it would be his turn another day.

Their good luck, they felt, had given them the right to think about a home; and sitting out on the doorstep that Summer evening they held consultation about it, and Jurgis took occasion to broach a weighty subject. Passing down the avenue to work that morning he had seen two boys leaving an advertisement from house to house; and seeing that there were pictures upon it Jurgis had asked for one and had rolled it up and tucked it into his shirt.

At noontime a man with whom he had been talking had read it to him and told him a little about it, with the result that Jurgis had conceived a wild idea.

He brought out the placard, which was quite a work of art. It was nearly two feet long, printed on calendered paper, with a selection of colors so bright that they shone even in the moonlight. The centre of the placard was occupied by a house, brilliantly painted, new, and dazzling. The roof of it was of a purple hue, and trimmed with gold; the house itself was silvery, and the doors and windows red.

"The Jungle," the Great Beef Trust Expose, Will Be Continued In the Sunday American

THE BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to-morrow will print a continuation of "The Jungle," the most famous book of the century, in which Upton Sinclair, the author, exposes the horrors of the Chicago packing houses, and explains the almost indescribable horror of the conditions under which the Beef Trust prepares the "foods" it sends forth to poison the American people. To-morrow's instalment will take up the story where it closes to-day.

42 SUFFOLK INDICTMENTS

Forty-two indictments were returned by the Suffolk county grand jury to-day. In seventeen of the cases submitted for hearing, no bills were found.

Prominent among the indictments was that against Elizabeth E. Hartford, charged with distributing at No. 178A Tremont street, printed advertisements of a business located in the same building where Susan Geary met her death. Miss Hartford, who is a good looking young woman, came into court shortly after the grand jury had reported, and pleaded not guilty.

GIVE PLAY TO BENEFIT CHILDREN MADE ORPHANS IN FRISCO QUAKE

YOUNG WOMEN WHO WILL HELP ORPHANS.

Old and Young Take Part in a Jolly Farce, "Carroty Nell."

Graceful Dancers and Talented Vocalists Will Appear in Potter Hall.

A benefit for the children of San Francisco, made orphans when the city was devastated by earthquake and fire, will be held this evening in Potter hall, New Century building, No. 177 Huntington avenue, and the program will be so interesting that it is believed that fact alone, aside from the worthiness of the charity, will fill the auditorium to overflowing. The plight of the little ones left without father and mother, after passing through scenes of horror beyond description, has touched kindly hearts all over the land.

The Boston benefit has been arranged by the Ladies' Physiological institute and the volunteers are talented young women, splendid vocalists and children who are as graceful dancers as have ever been seen in this city. The program is very varied and interesting. It not only includes acting by fifteen young lady pupils of Mrs. A. Isabella Davis of Quincy, a gifted elocutionist, who will appear in "Carroty Nell," a new two-act farce, but the star dancers of Mrs. Butler's festival; Alexander C. Steele, basso, of the Temple quartette and Mrs. Emma Shufelt Moore, who has a voice of exceptionally pleasing quality and will be heard twice in selections.

The dances include such clever specialties as the "The Gold Dust Twins," and "The Witches' Incantation," and the dancers will be Melba Concannon, Winifred Gilraine, Ina Brown, Ida Johnson, Volney Head, Bernice Tupper, Stella Craig, Evangeline Cousins, Hugh Tobias, Reginald Middleton and Charles Williams.

"Carroty Nell" is a farce full of action and replete with amusing situations. The scene is an orphan asylum and the young lady pupils of Mrs. Davis are afforded by it an ample opportunity to display talents which have made them popular entertainers. They are all well known in Quincy society and are taking the keenest personal interest in the worthy cause they have volunteered to aid. They are the Misses Minnie R. Hardwick, Ruth Packard, Marjorie Welch, Blanche Morrison, Elizabeth G. Pattee, Annie R. Black, Gertrude A. Shaw, Mary A. Thomas, Mary M. Faxon, Ruth Penniman, Maud W. MacFarlane, Lucie Elwell, Dulah C. Miller, Catherine Saville and Bee Morrison.

CHANGES FLAGS TO AVOID LAW

When the steamer Alice arrived to-day from Sama, Cuba, she exchanged the Norwegian for the British flag and will leave to-morrow as an English vessel on a voyage to Cuba. Because of the fact that she is owned by Americans, although built in Norway, the government of that country has compelled the surrender of its registry and ordered Captain Knutsen to pull down the Norwegian colors.

The vessel is owned by the Donald Steamship Company of New York and leased by the Noyes Brothers Fruit Company of this city.

"If Norway persists in this registry strictness," declared Captain Knutsen to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "it will mean that its flag will practically disappear from the high seas. Nearly all of the vessels now flying its colors are owned by residents of other countries, although constructed by Norwegian firms. Such a policy will be a great blow to the shipping interests of the country."

IN DEAD WOMAN FINDS MISSING WIFE

Edward L. Ferguson of Revere last night identified the young woman who dropped dead from heart disease at Ferrin and Bunker Hill streets Thursday afternoon, as his wife.

Mr. Ferguson stated that his wife left home Thursday to come to the city to do some shopping. He became alarmed when she failed to return in the evening, and seeing the newspaper story of the unclaimed woman in Charlestown, feared the worst.

CROSSED SEA TO WED; MAY BE DEPORTED

Hold Promised Wife of Suitor Who Lacks Divorce Papers in Former Marriage.

HE THOUGHT HE WAS FREE

Unless the immigration authorities at Washington interfere, when the steamship Ivernia sails for England next week she will carry back a pretty girl of twenty-five years, an English girl named Elizabeth Owen, who was to-day debarred from landing in this country because the man she came over with to marry here has been unable to show proper divorce proceedings from his first wife.

The man is John Stock, a puller in the employ of the Carnegie Steel works at Pittsburg, Pa. He is an Englishman, about thirty years old and has been in this country nearly ten years.

Stock married an American girl in Pittsburg four years ago, and later upon his return to England she refused to accompany him. During the time he was away, he supposed she had divorced him. He also instituted divorce proceedings which are still pending.

Stock wrote to England and asked the girl whom he had seen but a short time before to marry him. She consented, upon the ground that he secure a divorce. He went to England and brought his bride-to-be back with him on the Ivernia, which arrived here last Thursday. The immigration officials will not allow the girl to land until proper divorce proceedings are presented, and Stock has gone to Pittsburg in an effort to get them. Meanwhile, the heart-broken girl is being detained at the immigration office at Long Wharf.

HELD 3 BABIES OUT OF WINDOW

Mrs. Katie Cohen gathered up her three small children during a fire in her home on the third floor at No. 24 Stillman street at dawn to-day, and as flames blocked her way to the stairway, she ran with them to a window, where she leaned far out, holding them out of the smoke-filled room until the firemen arrived. Her cries of "Fire!" caused some one to turn in an alarm. The damage is only $25, but District Chief Garrity says the fire started mysteriously in a rubbish heap.

SOLDIERS' FIELD, Cambridge, June 9.—Harvard and Pennsylvania were the opponents on the varsity diamond here this afternoon, and a big crowd was on hand to see what will probably be the last athletic contest between the Crimson and the Quakers for a long time. Harvard had defeated Pennsylvania in the first game of the year at Philadelphia, 3 to 1, but it took the Cambridge nine eleven innings to turn the trick, so that a close game was looked for.

Al Castle was slated to do the twirling for the Crimson, as he showed excellent form in the game against Brown last Wednesday.

Yerkes singled. Hare struck out. Adams fanned. Currier threw Yerkese out, stealing second. NO RUNS.

Hay hit Leonard on the first ball pitched. Stephenson struck out. Leonard stole second. Pounds out, Thomas to Fennell. Hay tried to run with Dexter's measly roller to first, but the Harvard man beat him out. Dexter stole second. McCall struck out. NO RUNS.

YANKEE TENNIS PLAYERS GET IN FINALS

LONDON, June 9.—In to-day's preliminary round for the Davis tennis cup, Holcombe Ward, the American player, was defeated after a hard fight by A. F. Wilding of the Australasian team by the score of 6—3, 3—6, 0—6, 6—4 and 8—6.

Wilding recently defeated Raymond D. Little of the American team.

Raymond D. Little of America, in his match with L. O. S. Poidevin of the Australasian team, won a signal victory, taking the contest by the score of 6—2, 6—1, 5—7 and 6—2.

Little's victory gives the preliminary competition to the American team and entitles them to enter the finals against the English defenders of the cup, which will be played at Wimbledon on June 14.

In the contest at Aigburth for the Liverpool cup, D. R. Rhodes of Boston was defeated in the finals by Ward of Manchester. The score stood, 1—6, 7—5, and 6—3.

ANDOVER, June 9.—The beautiful Summer weather was a big incentive for the crowd to turn out at Brothers's Field this afternoon for the annual baseball game between the Andover and Exeter baseball nines. Every available seat at the grounds was taken, and the crowd lined many hundreds deep in back of the ropes which marked off the playing field.

Andover went into the game a favorite over her big rivals from New Hampshire. A great deal of betting was indulged in by the students, with Andover the prevailing choice at 10 to 7, as Andover defeated such strong nines as Harvard and Yale, while Exeter had slumped before many of the big college teams.

"Butts" Merritt was on the firing line for the home team. He is regarded as the best pitcher that has twirled for the local academy in years, and his admirers believed he would easily triumph over the Exeters.

Steve White, a former Dorchester High boy, was on the rubber for the visitors, and he entered the game with extreme confidence.

The Andover nine is led by Barney Reilley, who has played second base so cleverly during the past two seasons. Cooney, who pitched last season, captained Exeter and played centre field.

BRADLEY MAKES POOR SHOWING

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—Ike Bradley, the English feather champion, met Tommy O'Toole, before the National A. C. and performed like a second-rater. Not once during the fight did Bradley show any ability as a boxer. He is rugged and has a punch, and that lets him out. If O'Toole's left hand had not been bad, he would have had Bradley out.

MAY SOON CONTROL COLLEGEFOOTBALL

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 9.—The University of Pennsylvania has joined the Intercollegiate Athletic Association of the colleges and universities of the United States. Thirty colleges and universities have already become members of this association, which desires to control and elevate to a higher plane college athletics throughout the United States. Among those that have joined in addition to the University of Pennsylvania, are Swarthmore, Williams, Syracuse, Colgate, Oberlin, Holy Cross, West Point, Miami, Dickinson, Vanderbilt, Ohio, Wesleyan, St. Louis, Tufts, New York University, Grove City College, Allegheny College, Rutgers, Haverford, Washington and Jefferson, Niagara University and Western University of Pennsylvania.

Additions are being made to the list daily, and it is predicted that the association will be the strongest ever formed in this country by the next annual meeting in December.

The advent of Pennsylvania is of interest, since this institution was one of the seven that formerly controlled football. It was the wide revolt against the football rules committee that caused the formation of this association, which hopes to be able to control the rules by means of the committee appointed annually.

It was thought at first that none of the institutions represented on the old football rules committee would join the new association.

The University of Pennsylvania has done so and the matter is now under advisement by Yale, University of Chicago, and Annapolis. By the action of Pennsylvania, the new organization will receive powerful prestige and gives fair promise of controlling the football solution next Fall.

DUDLEY BOYS ARE CHAMPIONS NOW

For the first time in five years the Roger Wolcott school was defeated this morning at the Huntington Avenue grounds for the championship of the Grammar School League of Boston by the Dudley School, by the score of 8 to 3.

Aside from considerable rowdyism, in which the adherents of both sides joined, and which was quelled by the police, the game was clean and well contested. A protest was lodged immediately after the contest by the losing nine on the grounds that the Dudley School has been devoting school hours to practicing. It is very doubtful if the protest will be accepted.

The pitching of Goode for the Dudley School and of McLaughlin for the Roger Wolcotts were easily the features. At all stages of the game the former had his opponents at his mercy. McLaughlin used excellent control and rapped out a home run.

Special to the Boston American.

DETROIT, Mich., June 9.—Detroit at its first glimpse of the Boston American League Baseball Club of 1906 sized it up as considerably stronger than had been generally understood in the West, although the elements were all against a Boston victory. The way in which Parent, Stahl, Ferris and the rest took to the fine pitching of George Mullin showed that the team is dangerous with the stick, while the work of Catcher Peterson was as fine as that of any colt catcher ever seen at Bennet Park, and Detroit fans think they have a couple of finds themselves in Schmidt and Payne.

Manager Collins is expected in from Buffalo to-day and the players hope that he may be able to get into the game. Certainly his presence is needed, for third base as covered by Glaze is far from being a strong spot.

Stahl, with Collins's arrival, will become plain "Chick" once more. Yesterday he insisted on being addressed as "Mister." He lays down the managerial reins with a feeling of relief. He wants the fact known that Manager Armour insisted on playing in spite of the muddy field and threatening cyclone.

Wild Bill Donovan is the willing worker selected for battle to-day by Armour, while "Cy" Young is due for Boston.

Though Boston made as many runs as Detroit, she was beaten by a 4 to 2 score, two tallies that she scored in the eighth being lost through reversion to even innings, the game being stopped by a thunder storm. Her loss of these runs can hardly be classed as hard luck. Umpire Connor, in charge of the game, gave one of the most extraordinary exhibitions ever seen here, forcing the teams to play the last inning in rain and darkness that was relieved only by the frequent lightning flashes. When he did call the game it was because the men were actually driven from the field. Both Dinneen and Mullin had to cut out speed in the seventh, their catchers being unable to see fast balls.

The former champs can make no excuse for the loss of the game. Two costly errors, mixed with four singles, aided Detroit greatly in her run making in the sixth, when she got all of her tallies. On the other hand, Boston had the bases full and no one out with one run scored, forced in by Mullin in the opener, and yet did not get another man home. In each of the next two innings she had two men left. Dinneen pitched good ball outside of one inning, but had little chance to win with his team mates unable to take advantage of the many bad places into which Mullin put himself.

MADDEN'S THREE=YEAR=OLD SILIKO IS WELL ENGAGED

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 9.—The sensational three-year-old colt Siliko (2), 2:17½, owned by John E. Madden, has been shipped to Terre Taute and placed in the hands of the veteran reinsman, Knapsack McCarthy, who will fit him for all of his engagements for this season. The son of Moko and Silikon is a candidate for the Hartford, Horse Review and Kentucky futurities, and local horsemen regard him as one of the most promising youngsters that will be seen this season.

Siliko has wintered well at Madden's Hamburg place, and left here in the very pink of condition, having grown and spread out considerably during the Winter and Spring months, and he will not appear as small when lined up with other three-year-olds as he did in his two-year-old form.

Charles Marvin, who was a part owner of the youngster who drove him in all of his races last year, believes Siliko will be the best 3-year-old on this season and has made several private wagers with local trainers that he will defeat Lightsome in more events than the daughter of Constantine finishes in front of the Moko colt.

The recent marriage of "Count" Charles DeLaossa to a rich German woman has set the local trainers to guessing as to the future of the Spanish-American trainer, who, by the way, is a graduate of the Orin Hickok school of training, he having been associated with that late noted horseman for several years at Cleveland.

DeLaossa is pronounced by John Splan, Clem Beachy, Mike Bowerman, Ed Benyon and others of note as being a graduate horseman, and they all look to see him blossom forth during the coming season as a full fledged owner-trainer, with a stable composed of some of the best trotters and pacers in the country.

The fastest work of the present season at the local track was shown during the past week by the four-year-old pacer Anthem, in the Mansfield Farm stable. The daughter of Oratorio was sent a mile by Trainer H. M. Jones in 2:18 flat, the first mile paced or trotted here this year as good as 2:20.

Anthem was not asked to go a fast mile as a three-year-old, although during one of her trials she stepped a half in 1:06 at that age, a quarter of which she negotiated in 31s., showing that she possessed extreme speed.

Another good 4-year-old prospect in the Mansfield stable is Libretto, which young stallion recently changed hands, but whose new owner has not been made public by Trainer Jones. The latter will have the horse in charge this season, and if he continues to improve as he has done since being placed in training he will fill all of his engagements.

Dick Curtis, who trained Libretto as a 2-year-old, and who drove him when he finished second to Bon Voyage in the Horse Review Futurity in 1904, still regards him highly, and only recently asked Trainer Jones to put a price on him. It was this effort on the part of Curtis to buy him that developed the fact that he was among the horses recently disposed of by Trainer Jones.

GAI[illegible] Y, Ct., June 9.—Yale's varsity [illegible] a brisk three-mile spin down str[illegible] this morning on the Thames river, the longest it has taken since the crew came here. The water was choppy in spots, but was generally smooth. The crew's practice to-day was in increasing the stroke, which they hit up at times to thirty to the minute.

The freshmen went sent out as far as the navy yard before the first crew took the water for an easy spin. The four-oared crews of the freshmen and varsity met in a half-mile race, and the freshmen won by several lengths. All the men are in the pink of condition and are finishing up their examinations.

BROOKLINE BOYS WON ON CHARLES

Brookline High's four-oared crew won the first race for the interscholastic championship this afternoon on the Charles River, defeating the Cambridge Latin four by half a length.

The time was 5m. 28s., and is a record.

The makeup of the crews was as follows:

Cambridge Latin—Gray, stroke; Beard, 3; Jose, 2; Goodale, bow; Boynton, coxswain.

Brookline High—LeRoyer, stroke; Howe, 3; Sargent, 2; Pitkins, bow; Knapp, coxswain.

YALE VS. PRINCETON.

NEW HAVEN, June 9.—The New Haven baseball team left last night for Princeton, where the second game of the annual series between the two universities will be played to-day. Fifteen men were taken along. Captain O'Brien has not decided upon the lineup. It is expected that a big delegation of Yale men will go to Princeton to see the game.

ED. HUGHES GOES HOME.

Pitcher Ed. Hughes was given a leave of absence yesterday, and will return to his home in Chicago for the present. He refused to go with the Little Rock club of the Southern League, as he does not like the southern climate in the Summer months. He has not rounded into his best form and thought a change would do him good. The home club is willing to consider a trade for the pitcher.

N. Y. Giants and Highlanders May Play

BASEBALL IN ENGLAND

BY SAM CRANE.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A trip to England by a New York baseball team is the latest bit of news that local fandom will have to talk about.

There is not much doubt but that one or the other, perhaps both (and we are not getting swelled), will win a championship. In that case it is possible that both the Giants and Yankees will be invited across the pond. But that is claiming a bit too much of the baseball earth, although just as the present time it is not so visionary an outlook. According to what happened on Saturday, there is a look-in, and a big one, for both.

Our English cousins have become infatuated with our national game. They have forgotten the numerous lunches under the tents that go with a three-day seance at cricket and are, strange as it may appear, willing to forego their stomach for sport.

A league of baseball clubs is in existence in England and is playing games at present for the championship of Great Britain. Ireland is not included yet, but the "ould dart" will be there with both feet in time, never fear.

Now, while the baseball teams in England may, as they are playing the game at present, amuse themselves and a few friends, they are not putting up the style of game that will tend to make the great American game a thing of permanency there, especially where there is so much conservatism and love for cricket and other ancient institutions to be overcome.

The English players, who have taken up our game, are enthusiastic over it. But they are in Bush League class just now. Their playing is crude; not up to the standard—in fact, that a team picked up on the dump or any open lot in this city could produce. Consequently, many English gentlemen who are interested in the promotion of baseball in that country are desirous of having one of our New York teams go over there to give an illustrative exhibition of how the "real article" is played.

The expenses of two teams will be paid if necessary, and the champion teams would of course be selected as the ones to exhibit the beauties of the game to our ambitious, sport-loving cousins, who want to break away from the old fogyism that has made long drawn out cricket the only game there.

That short, lively, snappy contests and out-door sports that can be decided in two or three hours appeal to thousands of Englishmen in preference to cricket, is shown by the immense crowds that attend the championship games of Association football. They are decided in the afternoon. An attendance of 75,000 is said to be frequent occurence at the more important of these great games.

Association football has, in fact, put sport-loving Englishmen wise to the fact that it is best to have results—a game won or lost between meals, instead of wasting two or three days with sport and roast beef.

And this has been an entering wedge for baseball. Football is essentially a cold weather game. It is altogether too strenuous for the sunny months. Baseball fills in the happy medium. Reports from the old country say that the American game has taken a firm hold on the affections of the people, notwithstanding the opposition of the "ancients."

Mr. Newton Crane, a prominent lawyer of London, and one of the most earnest advocates of outdoor sports England has, is a thorough lover of baseball. For years, although an English cricket player of note, Mr. Crane has been an enthusiast on the American national game. He is foremost in the scheme to have the champion teams of this country pay England a visit, and when Mr. Crane interests himself in any project it is usually carried through. He has already written to friends in this city as a preliminary to the carrying out of the plan.

Baseball follows the flag like the all-consumed American cocktail. It is played to-day in the Philippines, Sandwich Islands, Santo Domingo, Cuba and even in far-away South Africa, Australia and Japan. Canada is represented in our own Eastern League, but if old England can be made to take it up baseball will be the all-national game, as I have long predicted it would become.

And then for an all-national championship—which, of course, would be played in New York—for haven't we the Yankees and Giants?

Can't lose our prestige, you know.

So all the Giants and Yankees have to do now is to win the pennants of their respective leagues, and there is a trip abroad in store for them, and on an ocean liner—not a cattle ship.

Get busy there!

The winners of the Olympian games won't be one, two, three as popular heroes.

This will not be the first invasion of England by American baseball players, although it promises to be by far the most important in the way of results. In 1874 the Bostons and Athletics, of Philadelphia, introduced baseball in England. Harry Wright was manager of the Bostons, and Al Reach was in charge of the Quaker delegation. Anson captained the latter, and George Wright the Hubites. Al Spalding, Jim O'Rourke and Tim Murnane were players. Not much of an impression was made on the Englishmen with baseball at that time, there being a too deep-seated objection against any innovation that would put cricket in the background, but the American ball players made a holy show of the Englishmen at their own game.

In 1888-89 the "Spalding Tourists," which included the Chicagoes and an "All-American" team, the latter including John Ward and Ned Hanlon, wound up their all-around-the-world tour in England, but also failed to dent the hearts of the old, conservative English cricketers.

But the times were not ripe then—now they are.

M'GRAW SAYS GIANTS WILL WIN AGAIN

NEW YORK, June 9.—To an intimate friend John McGraw said: "I have no fear of losing the pennant. Put that in your pipe and smoke it. Mathewson will be in shape very soon. All that ails him now is weakness in the legs. He needs exercise. His arm is as good, if not better, than last year. The schedule this year was the rankest I ever had. We have played only seven games out of forty on the home grounds, and then went West with a crippled team. They talk about Chicago. Rats! The Chicago pitchers, including Reulbach, are all in. We can beat them hands down. From now on things the home grounds, and then went West likely, for outfield, or some other good man. We have only two short trips to make West—one of fourteen games, the other twelve. You see, that means two-thirds of the rest of the games at home. I saw nothing out West to scare us, and confidently expect to take the lead and hold it."

CURRY THINKS HE HAS FAST GREEN PACER

That all around horseman, trainer and driver, Gil Curry, who is known to the sporting fraternity the whole country over, has spent the Winter and Spring in California, going there when he left the Butler stable last Fall.

This week he arrived in Cleveland, joining his brother, Jack, who is now located at the Glenville track. The latter has an extra good stable of horses to campaign through the Grand Circuit, and unless he finds an engagement Gil will race a few members of the string over the half-mile tracks, while Jack goes int odeep water with the best ones.

Speaking to a BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent of the horses Jack brought over from California, Gil enthused over Bonnie Steinway, the green pacer by Steinway, 2:25¾, dam Bon Bon, 2:26; dam of Bonnie Direct, 2:05¼. Bonnie Steinway wears the straps, but they are of the lightest weight. He is described a sa full-made, rugged little horse, with a great turn of speed. His trial last Fall was variously reported to have been timed in from 2:05¾ to 2:07¾. The last-named figure of itself is pretty good, and makes his chances appear right good for the Chamber of Commerce.

Jack, who is the most optimistic driver on the turf, thinks particularly well of the pacer Edwin S.'s (2:08) chances in the company he will meet. It was a fortunate thing for Jack that his horses had been shipped from San Francisco to Pleasanton before the quake came, as the army pressed all horses into service, regardless of their ownership or value.

HARVARD'S LAST ROW ON CHARLES

This afternoon at 2 o'clock will be the last chance for the undergraduates to see the Harvard eight work out on the Charles, as Monday the men will go down to New London to prepare for their coming regatta with the Yale oarsmen. Monday morning the two Harvard eight oared shells, two fours and two singles will be sent to the crews' headquarters and in the afternoon the varsity and freshmen squads will go to New London in time for a row.

THE BARON WORKS FAST AT CLINTON TRACK

At the Clinton, Mass., track A. C. Hawkins, of Lancaster, has five head of horses being worked for the races by Trainer Spaulding, and judging by the way the latter talks, it is easily to be seen that he has a hunch that it will be no uncommon occurrence to note his name at the head of the race summaries this season with the timber he has in hand.

Probably the one he thinks the most of is The Baron, 2:19¼, which is booked to get a record before Fall of 2:10. He is going nice and steady this year, though the fastest quarter he has trotted to date is 34 seconds.

Baron Nutwood, a handsome bay six-year-old stallion, by Baron Wilkes, dam Catella, by Stamboul; second dam by Nutwood, can trot a 2:20 gait. Baridine, by Baritone (2:23¼), dam Fanny T., by Aberdeen, is a large, handsome two-year-old colt that trotted a quarter in 34 seconds last year. Miss Baritone, by Baritone, out of the dam of Regal Baron (2:23¼), is a three-year-old that can step a quarter in 35 seconds and looks like the real thing. These two are entered in the futurities.

A chestnut mare, Alane, by Allandorf (2:19½), out of a thoroughbred mare, is showing a lot of speed, although she has just got to pacing. One of the handsomest mares is Flora Adbell, out of Adbell (1), (2:28), out of Edna McGregor, dam of Reddy (2:20¾), by Robert McGregor; second dam Lotta (2:24¼), (dam of Russell McGregor, 2:22¼), by Florida; third dam Kate Porter, by Daniel Lambert. This is a finely gaited mare of about 1,100 pounds that Mr. Hawkins bought last year after seeing her show a mile in 2:23¼ as a four-year-old, brought her home and bred her to Baritone.

Mr. Hawkins has some of the best bred broodmares in the country on his farm in Lancaster, and is using Baritone (2:22¼), son of Baron Wilkes, in the stud, and will have twelve foals by him this year. He has a choice lot of young stock from such mares as Lesura, by Allerton, out of the great broodmare Cyprus, by Strathmore; Chickadee (dam of Regal Baron, 2:23¼), by Mambrino King; Catella, by Stamboul (dam by Nutwood); Beleno (dam of The Baron, 2:19¼) and Baron Silver (2:25¾), by El Dorado, son of Guy Wilkes; second dam, Fanny T., by Aberdeen. Princess Fanchon, by Chimes, has a handsome bay colt at foot by Baritone. A daughter of Alcantara, out of a mare by Alcyone, is also among the broodmares.

BASLE TELLS WHY HE LOOKS AROUND

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Charles Basle, who is admittedly one of the best drivers on the American track to-day, and whose past performances place him on an equality with the leaders, does not like my ideas expressed in the AMERICAN of last Sunday. In a letter he says:

"While some people will believe that turning around to watch one's opponents in a race is grand stand play and useless, I wish to state that to the best of my knowledge it is only good and careful driving, and if such a thing is dangerous, it is only to the green driver, who does not know how to choose the safe time to do it, and such a man should not be allowed on a race track.

"When driving in a race, and, in fact, anywhere else, it is necessary to figure not only on what you are going to do, but also, and, I should say especially, on what the other man is going to do.

"You probably have noticed that when I turned around it was always before getting into one of the turns, when it is most necessary to know the exact position of your competitor, as only one certain part of the track being safe in a turn at full speed, it would be necessary to change your tactics, your adversary being close upon you. I do not write this letter for the sake of kicking, but in the hope you will change your mind on what you think reckless driving, as I have driven carefully for a number of years."

There is, of course, some truth in what Basle writes. Still, the fact remains, that he has no concern with what is behind him. It is the second man's place to look out for that, and for a man to take care of himself and not the man following him. Basle has always been recognized as a good driver. He is a good driver. No one questions that. Still he looks behind him. That may not be reckless driving. Still, it is dangerous. In other lines of sport on the track this has caused more than one disqualification. If a man were doned for looking at him, and watching doner for looking at him, and watching what he was doing, but when the length of the stretch separates one from the other there is no cause to look backwards. Oldfield, who, when need be, is as strong a grand stand player as there is in the world, has learned full well the dangers of looklettlng ing backwards, and he once told the writer that he had learned the lesson of looking forwards, taking care of himself and letting the other fellow do likewise. Ross, the one-mile international champion, was never known to look behind.

* * *

James Couzens, chairman of the executive committee of the Unlicensed Manufacturers' Association, says that it is the sense of the committee that the proposed rule limiting the entries in the Glidden tour to cars weighing more than 2,000 pounds, was unfair to every manufacturer and individual motorists, and if enforced, the association favored a recommendation to all its members asking them to decline to make entries. In other respects, the association strongly favors the Glidden tour and similar tours, conducted by the A. A. A. and other organizations, as being of great benefit to automobiling in general.

* * *

The tremendous extent to which the manufacturing of motor driven vehicles has reached in this country is shown with startling clearness in the list of models and manufacturers given in a recently issued motor car directory. This directory shows that 136 makes of cars were sold in this country the past year. The manufacturers of these cars made them in 416 different styles and sizes. Of the total number of makes sold only about thirty were of foreign manufacture, leaving more than 100 different automobile building concerns in this country, who are making 375 different models. Such has become the industry which a few years ago was looked upon as being a good deal of an experiment.

* * *

When conducted under adequate rules, long distance tours are better than races for yielding practical information to buyers concerning the merits of cars for general road service an dthe year is rich with promise in this respect. The two big tours abroad and the Glidden contest here will have a value and an interest for the general road service and the year is rich with Prix in France and the Vanderbilt cup race here. A likely development of the year's touring tests will be a chance to fairly compare the merits of American and foreign cars, several entries of imported cars being promised for the Glidden tour, notably a Fiat and a Panhard. Something about the relative touring merits of American and foreign cars is to be learned from abroad, also, this year, even before the Glidden contest, as one of the best cars made is competing in both the big tours of Europe. It is unfortunate that there should be only one such, because the percentage of chance is unfair. The odds against him are too great to hope for a victory by the single American entry in the Herkomer tour of the European Circuit. Should he meet with mishap and fail, it would be the failure of 100 per cent. of the American cars entered; whereas were there several cars of the same sort competing, as there are of the foreign makes, one of them might meet with accident, yet one of the others win the contest.

JOHN MACK MADE GOOD

John J. Mack, Yale's track coach and football trainer, is back at his home in Boston, where he will remain till the Yale Summer school opens. He will have charge of the department of athletic sports and will lecture on college and amateur athletics. He will also give laboratory work in the different sports and in the conditioning of athletes.

Mack has decidedly made a hit at Yale, and he will be found at the university another year in the same capacity as last season. He has "made good" as Mike Murphy's successor, and it looks as if he would be a fixture in Mike Murphy's role as regular Yale coach.

SCHOOL CREWS TO RACE

WORCESTER, June 9.—The prep school rowing championship for this section of New England will be awarded to the winner of the one and one-half mile race that is to be rowed on the Lake Quinsigamond regatta course this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock! The contending crews are Worcester High and Springfield High schools. Both these crews are conceded first places among the high school crews of this section. As a rule the first honor has been given the local crews, through the Springfield boys have also showed great ability on the water.

In 1904 the Worcester High crew defeated the Stone's school crew of Boston on the Charles River course, and later in the season in a race with the Wachusett crew they came within two seconds of equalling the world's record for the mile and a half straightway course. Two members of this year's crew held seats in the 1904 races and pulled oars when the remarkable time was made. They are Captain Frank Dean, who is rowing bow this year, and Fred R. Crerie, who is rowing at No. 7.

Both crews have been training all the Spring for the race, and the coaches of the squads announce their oarsmen to be in excellent condition for the hard race. The following table will show the statistics of the crews. It will be observed that the average weight of the Worcester crew is a little below that of the Springfield eight. The local crew averages 150.5 pounds, and the Springfield crew averages 151⅛ pounds. The average age of the local crew is 18⅛ and that of the Springfield crew is 19 years. The table is:

DRAKE'S HORSES TO RACE AT SALEM

The most ambitious effort yet made by turfmen to introduce thoroughbred racing into New England will have its initial attempt at success at Rockingham Park, near Salem, N. H., in the latter part of this month. A great deal of money has been spent on this racing plant, and just as great care will be taken by the promoters to conduct the course in a manner that will in no way offend the ideas of the people of that section. The question of booking, which has been more or less unpleasantly talked of around the metropolitan tracks and in the West, is one of the most important things that the Rockingham Park people have to deal with.

On the authority of one of the stockholders of the Rockingham Park Association, there will be no booking, as it is commonly understood by racing people. No form of gambling will be allowed on the course, and the only wagers that can be made will be between man and man. It will be the same thing as the commissioners at the clubhouse around the big tracks in New York, strictly on the English lines of conducting booking and taking wagers. Commissioners will have the right to circulate among the visitors at the clubhouse and will take such bets as may be offered them.

The Rockingham Park Association says its meetings will be in distinct contrast to State fairs in one respect at least—that is, the gambling end of it. The State fairs are spots for the gathering of all sorts of crooks and for all sorts of games which are put up to the unsophisticated public. The shells, hieronymus, the fish pond, the Eagle bird and all those notorious games flourish. It is believed that the ideas which the Rockingham Park people will induce at Salem will do much toward stopping the old State fair gambling evil in New England.

John A. Drake will go to Rockingham Park with his entire stable and will race there at the first spring meeting of the association beginning June 28. Mr. Drake is enthusiastic over the prospects of Salem and makes good by sending his string there to race. He has taken a cottage near Salem and will be a regular attendant at the course. Enoch Wisbard, of course, will have charge of the horses.

GOODMAN TO MEET NEARY

The Lincoln Club has secured for next Thursday night one of the best possible fistic cards. The wonderful little Milwaukee scrapper, Charley Neary, will face Kid Goodman in a fifteen-round contest to a decision, and it promises to be one of the most stubborn contests seen in a long time.

Neary showed against Jimmy Briggs that he is just as formidable as Battling Nelson, possessing the same rugged style and never stopping from the moment that the gong starts for the commencement of hostilities.

The club is especially fortunate in securing such a great attraction at this time, as it will be the opening card under the new management, and the members are sure to appreciate such a star attraction.

By next Thursday the club will be thoroughly renovated, with the bleachers installed and the new ring in position. It is a change that will be thoroughly appreciated.

The preliminaries will be Billy Connatty vs. Willie Riley, six rounds; Beddo McGrath vs. Joe Geary, eight rounds.

Are the Girls to Blame Because So Many Men Remain Bachelors?

By Beatrice Fairfax

AND still the letters come, hundreds of them, from both bachelors and girls. I must say that just at present the girls are having rather the best of it. The bachelors are learning the power of the woman scorned.

Having called the girls all sorts of uncomplimentary names, they are now getting paid in their own coin, and they don't seem to relish it.

Keep it up, girls; you must teach these unruly young men that they cannot indulge in this wholesale denunciation unrebuked.

In their hearts they know that they are quite in the wrong, but they like to talk.

However, they must be made to talk respectfully when it comes to discussing America's best product—the modern girl.

Warns Young Men

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Referring to letter signed "Solitary," wherein she apparently endeavors to convey the impression that she revels in her single blessedness and would marry no man, thereby forfeiting the "pleasure" of a latch key, her own wages and independence, I can simply say that her letter is as good as an affidavit that she is an extremely selfish and self-satisfied person and one in whom no male would be seriously interested, and consequently she is in no danger of the necessity of giving up the "pleasures" she refers to.

Undoubtedly when she reaches a mature and probably lonely period of life and the charms of youth have vanished, she will sincerely regret that the genuine pleasure of being wife and mother are denied to her. Trusting that no young man will be unfortunate enough to risk a proposal to "Solitary" or any other young lady of same opinions, I am "BENEDICT-TO-BE."

Boston.

One Man's Experience

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I don't like to see the bachelors condemned without saying a word in their behalf. I went with a young lady for nearly three years and loved her more at the end of that time than ever I loved anyone in the world, except my mother. After going with her for over a year and a half I told of my hopes and she gave me all the encouragement any man could expect, but when the most serious moment came then she declined, giving for her reasons that she was earning good money and was enjoying herself as she was, single; but if she got married she would have to settle down and would not get any more pleasure out of life. Again, she said that I was not earning enough to give her as good a home as she has now and that she didn't want to settle down to bringing up a family.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I'm twenty-five years of age and am earning $15 a week, with much brighter prospects ahead. I'm not dissipated in any way, and the only habit I have is smoking. When I've not been to see her I've been at home. I've never gone anywhere unless she was with me. I've not been selfish to her in any way and have done all that I could to please her, and even gone without things for myself to get her something that I knew she wanted and would be pleased with, and yet, you see what happened.

When we parted she told me that she loved me more than any man she ever met, but yet her imagination of losing all good times if she got married induced her to say "No." If there are many girls like that in the world can you blame men for remaining old bachelors? What have other readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN to say to that? READER.

Lynn.

Protest From Lynn

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

In your much discussed articles, "Why Men Dont' Marry," I can see no reason to think marriage a failure. One worthy bachelor makes the statement that to start small is a case of staying small.

Such a statement is absurd. A good wife is no hindrance to a man's prosperity. But on the other hand, she is an equal helpmate in every respect. There are scores of men, who were poor at the time of their marriage who are millionares today.

One of the fair sex also states that she would not marry a man who earned only $900 per annum. We believe her, because her tastes are the same as the millionaire's daughter "who toils not neither does she spin." I admit, however, that it does seem discouraging to the average young man to read about the thousands of young women who seek divorces. But do they do it because the husband is not able to support them? In nine cases out of ten the chief cause is lack of love. It is all very well to have bright financial prospects when entering matrimony, but the marriage without love is a hollow mockery. A true marriage is always for the better—never for the worse.

Lynn. "A. A. S."

We'll Get Revenge

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been reading with great interest the letters from bachelors and the much-abused weaker sex. Now, look here, Mr. Bachelor, you mustn't blame us for everything. You know you are just as extravagant as we; that, while you don't rave over a beautiful peek-a-boo shirt waist as a girl naturally will, you grow frantic over a pair of nice silk socks. Not that I blame you for it; I don't. I like all the men I go out with to look nice, and the more particular they are the more I like them. It's the same way with the men.

They may "knock" us for extravagance in dress, but if a girl didn't blow in money for certain little dainties to make her look pretty men would be the first to notice it—and miss it. Now, 'fess up, bachelors; you do love a girl to rig up when you take her out, don't you? Don't it make your poor old hearts flutter just a tiny little when some pink-and-white piece of feminine gender togs all up, just for you? Well, it does, all right. I know it.

The old gentleman who called girls a pack of "extravagant snobs" ought to be sent to bed minus his supper. But perhaps the right one for him hasn't come along. Our revenge will come when some "pretty, dimpled little darling" finally cracks his heart, and then he'll cease to be an unclaimed blessing. Think—won't it be revenge when that little wife comes home some day to inform her loving husband that she's just seen "the most beautiful hat—real cheap, honestly, now, dear, only $20," and won't he buy it for her? What about it, girls? A. W.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

"JEST try me, sir!" cried the urchin eagerly. His eyes had seen a piece of silver gleam in Grantham's hand. Dexterously he caught the dollar tossed to him with a delighted grin.

He touched his cap to Rosamund, bestowed a friendly nod on Grantham and wiggled through the hedge again.

"Queer little beggar!" said Grantham to Rosamund. "Wonder who he is? You know, I think the little chap is straight."

Meanwhile John Herries was waiting in Dr. Bond's house at Jamaica in a fever of anxiety.

He felt shaken and ill; his head ached dully, for the blow had been a severe one; the doctor assured him he had been lucky to escape without more serious injury, as might have easily have been the case.

An Anxious Invalid.

His first inclination on awakening that morning after a long sleep had been to return home, but the doctor had advised him to rest quietly where he was for the present. He was tortured by suspense about Olga Vail.

On recovering consciousness, when he learned that nothing was known of the whereabouts of his companion, his anxiety had so preyed upon him that Dr. Bond had thought it advisable to administer a sleeping draught; he had lain in a deep slumber until late in the morning.

Herries awoke, feeling much better for his sleep, but his cause for anxiety was as far from being removed as ever.

No lady had called, the doctor's wife said, in answer to his inquiries; evidently she thought it was a hallucination of his brief period of unconsciousness that there had been a lady in the car at the time.

Herries realized what was in her thoughts, and it suddenly struck him that it would be safer to leave that impression uncorrected; otherwise there might be inquiries as to the lady in question difficult to answer should the doctor mention it to the police.

What had happened to Olga Vail? She seemed to have disappeared at the very moment that followed his accident. The doctor's carriage had come upon him almost immediately after he was flung out. Those in the other machine must have seen Olga, but evidently they had not mentioned his companion to Dr. Bond; probably the driver was only anxious to proceed on his journey before his own share in the accident could be questioned.

Had the girl fallen again into the hands of the police who were hunting for her?

He asked for the early editions of the evening papers, and feverishly scanned the columns. If Olga had been arrested, at least the mid-day editions contained no hint of it, and this relieved his anxiety a little. Before the later editions reached Jamaica Grantham arrived.

"Well, old man, this is a bit of bad luck!" was his friend's greeting. "How are you feeling?"

A Note from Olga.

"A bit tired out and lame, otherwise I don't think there's much wrong with me. Awfully good of you to come so soon."

"Whatever mad freak took you off motoring at that hour of the night? and so secretly, too, you old fraud!" cried Grantham, relieved to find his friend looking better than he had expected. "There, old man, I won't bother you with my nonsense," he added, hastily, as he saw from Herries's face that he did not care to be questioned. "I was only joking—no business of mine, of course. I've got a note for you, and a message."

"A note?" cried Herries, eagerly.

Was it from Rosamund? he wondered. The remembrance of Rosamund's cool parting from him last night had crept in between him and his other thoughts a score of times since he saw her face in the moonlight with an expression on it he had never seen there before, as she turned away, refusing to listen to his explanation.

And he thought that Rosamund had misjudged him, that he had fallen in her estimation by his lie, had added its pain to the other anxieties that troubled him. Rosamund could not know that he had lied to save a woman in desperate straits—he who would not have lied to save himself.

"Is it from Rosamund—Miss Wynter?" he asked impatiently.

"No," Grantham said, though I understand it is from a lady. A strange messenger brought it." And he handed the rather crumpled envelope to his friend.

Grantham watched Herries open it and read the contents and saw a look of excitement cross his face; clearly the boy had not overstated the importance of his errand.

Who was the writer?—"The lady as was with Mr. Herries in the motor," the boy had said. Was his friend entangled in some liaison of which he was ashamed, that he kept resolutely silent about having a companion at the time of his accident? It was so unlike John Herries, and Grantham tried to put the doubt from him, yet it kept recurring in spite of himself.

CHAPTER XLII.

The Hue and Cry

HERRIES looked up. "You spoke of a message," he cried; "what message?"

"The boy who brought that note wanted you to meet him at 9 to-night at Town Hall here," said Grantham. "But you aren't in a fit state to go, old man. Can I help you? Look here, if you are in any bother, let me be of some use if I can."

"It isn't that I don't trust you, Dick; I'd trust you sooner than any man I know," cried Herries quickly; "only in this case it involves another's secret, so I'm not at liberty to tell you, old chap. I'm all right; well enough to go out to-night. For I must keep this appointment, Dick, well or not well," he said decidedly.

And he looked again at the hurriedly pencilled note. It was brief and told him little, but enough to torture him with new anxiety.

"You may trust absolutely the boy who brings this. Never in my life had I such need of your help, and I have no one else but you to turn to now in my need.—Olga."

John Herries started at the words.

What did they mean? What could have happened to Olga?

* * * * * * *

When Herries was flung out of the car, Olga had escaped a similar fate by the merest hair's-breath.

As the car skidded on the street car rail she clutched desperately at the seat, and clung to it as the car rushed into the street lamp.

Olga saw the danger a moment before the collision; had even time to wonder if the impact would explode the gasoline, and kill both her and her companion. As the machine dashed across the road Herries had jammed down the foot-brake with all his force, and this lessened the shock of the impact. Fortunately, in the recoil did not turn over.

Bogus Envoys Hoax Two Mighty Rulers

TO hoax a king! To make game of an emperor! Risky experiments to attempt, no doubt. And yet they are attempted, and attempted successfully, too, occasionally.

One quite recently, for example, that august and very-much-in-earnest monarch, the German Kaiser, was completely taken in by a dusky adventurer from Central Africa, who posed as the envoy of a powerful native potentate, anxious to secure the Emperor's support against "foreign aggression."

The sham plenipotentiary had with him a number of other natives, all attired with costly, if somewhat barbaric, magnificence, and neither the Kaiser nor his Ministers seem to have had the least suspicion that he was other than what he represented himself to be.

The "embassy" was welcomed with official honors at Hamburg on their arrival in Germany, and afterwards at Berlin they were solemnly received at Court, given an audience by the Emperor and loaded with presents. They were also the guests of honor at a grand military review, and a State banquet for them was in process of arrangement when the truth accidentally leaked out.

So far from being accredited representatives of a sovereign prince, the dusky strangers were, it transpired, merely natives of the humbler class, sent to Europe in connection with some showman's enterprise, and hired at so much a day by the originator of the hoax.

King Edward was very much amused at his royal kinsman's discomfiture in this matter, because he had himself undergone a somewhat similar experience.

In the early part of the year 1895 the King of Ashantee was protesting vigorously against the exploitation of his country by unauthorized gold-seekers and other adventurers, and there was considerable bother with the Colonial Office in consequence.

Suddenly appeared on the scene two self-styled envoys from King Prempeh, calling themselves the "Princes" John and Albert Ansah, and claiming to be empowered by their master to dispose of huge concessions on merely nominal terms.

At first the British Government was hugely delighted. The "Princes" were to be received at the Colonial Office, presented to the Prince of Wales (acting in place of his mother, the Queen), and generally made much of.

But at the last moment a cipher wire was received from Cape Coast Castle which exposed the whole business, and the "envoys" were sent about their business, just in the nick of time.

It transpired that they were merely political adventurers of the most pronounced type.

RICE PUDDING WITH FRUIT

INTO a pint of new milk put two tablespoonfuls of well-washed rice. Pare and quarter two large cooking apples, and add them to the rice and milk. Simmer all together until the rice is very soft, then add one egg—beaten—to bind it. Serve with custard.

Girls, Be Careful How and to Whom You Write Letters

EVERY woman loves a love letter.

And, fortunately, every woman at some time or other during her life is the happy recipient of many a tender little epistle breathing eternal love and constancy.

Some of the most beautiful love letters ever written were penned by the world's greatest men, and alas! some of the silliest were written by men equally great.

Bulwer, as was shown in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S editorial column lately, could descend to the utmost drivel in his love letters, and he in other ways was a famous man.

Robert Browning, Bismarck, Victor Hugo and Napoleon wrote the most exquisite of love letters.

However, it is not the actual wording that makes a love letter precious; it is the sentiment.

A man may not be gifted with the power to write flowery sentiments, but at least he can tell a woman in plain words that he loves her, and, after all, that is what she wants.

Of course if he is able to write a beautiful letter so much the better, but his inability to do so need not prevent him from writing at all.

To a woman a letter from the man she loves is a very precious thing. She reads it again and again, even after she knows its every word by heart, and finally puts it away with its predecessors. She could not think of destroying it.

Now a man undoubtedly thinks a good deal of a letter from the woman he loves, but nevertheless after he has read it he drops it into a pocket or wallet, together with bills, circulars business letters, etc.

Poor little love letter—it finds itself in strange, prosaic company.

It is hard to destroy a love letter, and yet it is foolish to keep it, for sometimes you know the most impassioned of love letters come from the ones you outgrow your love for.

Very few girls or men marry their first loves, but the first loves write very sentimental love letters.

As years go by those letters are apt to fall into the hands of people who have no tender memories connected with them, and often the poor little effusions are mercilessly ridiculed.

Girls cannot be too careful in their letter writing.

If a girl is merely keeping up a friendly correspondence with a man there is no necessity for her writing him more than a pleasant, chatty letter.

If things are more serious than mere friendship she can let him see that she cares for him, and his letters without going into extremes of sentiment and becoming over affectionate.

Written words are unquestionable evidence. Never write anything that you could not speak.

Do not enter into correspondence with a man you have only met a few times; you cannot tell how he will treat your letters.

For all you know he may read them to his men friends; men have been known to do that despicable thing.

Also when you receive a letter from a man keep it to yourself. In reading it to other girls you show bad taste and betrayal of confidence.

A love letter is a sacred thing and intended only for the eyes of the person to whom it is written.

Don't write foolish, gushing letters; you can be just as convincing in simple, sincere language.

And once more, dear girls, be very, very sure that the men to whom you write are worthy of your friendship.

SIMPLE FRYING BATTER

TAKE four ounces of flour and work it smooth while quite dry, then add gradually a tablespoonful of best salad oil and a quarter of a pint of tepid water; this must be mixed very smoothly with a wooden spoon. Let the batter stand for at least an hour, then beat together lightly; add the beaten white of one or two eggs, and use.

Jewelry Flashes for Up-to-Date Women

BROOCHES are being much worn again, and the newest designs show clusters of brightly colored gems, apparently thrown together in confusion, but really arranged with method. Pendants, however, remain the most fashionable ornament. Bangles are also great favorites now, and are to be seen in a variety of forms. Their favor is due to the elbow sleeve, which is so very fashionable at the present time.

One of the most fashionable stones this year is the New Zealand jade or green stone. It is becoming quite as popular as the rough turquoise and other stones of inexpensive varieties.

Jewelled combs are gaining in popularity, and the high Spanish pattern is much in favor. It is made, as a rule, of carved tortoise shell, without any additional jewels, though there are several lofty patterns that are gemmed or wrought with gold.

The newest necklaces show locket effects. The chains are quite short, and if there is not a pendant a broad ornamental network across the front takes its place. Garnet chains and bracelets are decidedly fashionable just now.

"Did you see any lions at sea?" says she. "Sea lions?" says I, as I held her hand.

"No, I didn't see any sea lions at sea. But I see a sea lion a-lyin' on land."

"Oh, the sea is a sinister place," says she; "There's lobsters there, and there's sharks to fear."

"There's sharkier sharks on land," says I, "And lobbier lobsters, too, my dear."

MASTER'S NOTICE OF SALE
Quincy Quarries Company Properties.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to the decree of foreclosure and sale made and entered by the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts on the 29th day of May, 1906, in a certain cause in equity pending in said court, entitled "National Granite Bank of Quincy, et al. vs Quincy Quarries Company and American Loan and Trust Company vs. Quincy Quarries Company," I, Thomas J. Dunphy, Special Master, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder or bidders, upon the mortgaged premises at the office of the said Quincy Quarries Company, situated on what is known as the Hitchcock Quarry Property, on Quarry street in the City of Quincy in said District of Massachusetts on Monday the 9th day of July, 1906, at 11 o'clock A. M., all the real estate and personal property of every nature and description embraced in and covered by the mortgage executed by the said Quincy Quarries Company to the American Loan & Trust Company, dated October 1, 1904, upon which the said mortgage is adjudicated by said decree to be a lien.

Said real estate is fully described in the above mentioned decree and consists of fifty-nine parcels of real estate situate in Norfolk County, Massachusetts, and includes among others the quarry properties usually known as the "Hitchcock," the "Dell," the "Fallon," the "Frederick & Field," the "Patterson," the "Mathuars," the "Berry," the "Gold-leaf," the "Prout," the "Bed-bug," the "Craig & Richards," the "Carr," the "Fuller" quarries and the quarry properties and appurtenances thereto, formerly belonging to the O. Said personal property, consisting of drills, bars, hammers, chains, dogs, wedges, locks, derricks, boilers, engines, supplies and other property, is fully described in said decree, dated May 29th, 1906, to which reference is hereby made for a complete description thereof.

By the terms of said decree, said mortgage is made a lien upon said personal property in so far as the said personal property is now in existence and has not been consumed by the Quincy Quarries Company in the course of its business since the giving of said mortgage, and only such of said personal property as is now in existence is embraced in this branch of this sale.

Said real estate and personal property will be sold as one parcel or in one lot and without division.

Such sale will be made, however, subject to any unpaid taxes, sewer assessments and also any other liens imposed by law which may be determined by the court to be prior to the lien of said mortgage and be ordered by the court to be paid. Said sale, so far as it relates to the property covered thereby, will also be made subject to the two mortgages referred to in the description of said real estate hereinbefore contained, [illegible]

A mortgage executed by Thomas F. McAnarney to David N. Haynes, dated May 11, 1901, given to secure a note for Thirty-five Thousand ($35,000) of same date, which said note and mortgage have been assigned to and are now held by the Quincy Savings Bank of Quincy, Massachusetts, which mortgage constitutes a lien prior to the lien of the mortgage hereby foreclosed upon that certain tract of land fully described in said decree and referred to therein as Tract No. 59.

Also a mortgage executed by the O. T. Rogers Granite Company to Enos Ricker for $5,000, dated April 1, 1890, given to secure a note for $5,000, of the same date, which said note and mortgage have been assigned to and are now held by Marshall P. Wright, and which mortgage constitutes a lien prior to the lien of the mortgage hereby foreclosed upon those certain tracts of land fully described and referred to therein as Tracts Nos. 49, 50, 51, 52 and 53.

The Special Master will receive no bid for the property unless at or before the time of making the bid, the bidder deposits the sum of Five Thousand ($5,000) Dollars cash or a certified check or checks satisfactory to the solicitors for the complainants in the above cause as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid and complete his purchase, if upon being reported to the court the same is accepted and confirmed. Such purchaser shall also, upon the confirmation of such sale and from time to time thereafter, pay such further portions of said bid and purchase price in cash as the court may direct in order to meet the expenses of foreclosure and sale and the distributive share due upon all bonds not deposited in payment of the purchase price hereinafter permitted.

The balance of the purchase price not required to be paid in cash may either be paid in cash or the purchaser may settle and make good such balance of the bid in whole or in part by paying over and surrendering to the Special Master outstanding bonds and overdue coupons appertaining thereto secured by said mortgage of October 1, 1904, as provided by the terms of said decree.

Upon confirmation of the sale and upon payment of the purchase price bid by the purchaser or upon making such provision as the court shall approve for the payment thereof, the Special Master will make, execute and deliver to the purchaser or purchasers, or his or their assigns, a deed or deeds of the property sold, and upon confirmation of such sale and full compliance with the terms of sale by the purchaser or purchasers he or they or his or their assigns shall be entitled to proper deeds of further assurance to be executed and delivered according to law by the defendant Quincy Quarries Company, and a proper deed of release by the American Loan & Trust Company as trustee under said mortgage.

At the same time and place, and immediately following the foregoing sale, I will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder or bidders, all the personal property of every nature and description owned by the Quincy Quarries Company, acquired since the execution of said mortgage deed of trust and now owned by it (other than cash on hand and bills and accounts receivable due to it and now being collected by its Receiver). Said personal property consists of drills, bars, hammers, chains, dogs, wedges, locks, derricks, boilers, engines and other miscellaneous supplies used in quarrying, and is fully described in said decree, dated May 29th, 1906, to which reference is made for a complete description thereof. The sale of said last above mentioned personal property shall be made upon the same terms as the sale of the mortgaged premises and personal property, except that only the sum of Two Thousand Dollars shall be required to be deposited by the bidder as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid and complete his purchase; and the further exception that upon being reported to the court and accepted and confirmed, the balance of the purchase price bid for said unmortgaged personal property shall be paid in cash by such purchaser.

The Special Master is authorized, at the request of the solicitors for the complainants in this cause to adjourn or postpone the said sales and, without further notice or advertisement, to proceed with such sales on any day to which the said sales may have been adjourned.

The court expressly reserves the right to reject any bid, and also to retake possession of and resell said premises and property upon the failure of any purchaser for twenty days to comply with any order of court requiring any payment on account of the purchase price.

If any bid shall be accepted by the court, and the person or persons making the same shall fail to comply with all the conditions of sale and all orders of the court in respect thereto, the sum deposited by the bidder may be forfeited and shall be applied as the court may direct.

For further particulars and for a more specific description of the property ordered to be sold, both that mortgaged and that unmortgaged, reference is made to the above mentioned decree of said court, copy of which may be seen in the Clerk's Office of said court or at the office of the American Loan & Trust Company, 53 State Street, Boston, Massachusetts, or at the office of the Quincy Quarries Company (in charge of the undersigned, its Receiver), Quincy, Massachusetts.

Dated June 9th, 1906.

The Young Woman With the Tattooed Face

She Has Learned That "Beauty" Is Modified by Geography

Two women sat together in a street car. All the other women and men in the car gazed steadily at one of the two.

She was a young woman—tall, broad-shouldered and very dark. Her face was the color of copper, her hair jet black; her brown hands were big and strong.

With one of the hands she covered up as much of her face as she could and she sat embarrassed, with her eyes turned upon the floor.

She was an outlandish and pathetic sight in a great city and among people so different from her own kind. And the people stared at her with the heartless curiosity that is usual among the "civilized."

In her dress the young woman was not unusual. She wore a faded sort of brown jacket and a skirt of pale blue with white spots. It was plain to those who know how charity works that assorted fragments of wardrobes given away to the poor made up her dress.

What worried her and fixed the eyes of the crowd were THE STRANGE TATTOO MARKS ON THE YOUNG WOMAN'S FACE. All of her chin from the lower lip down was tattooed in a fanciful pattern of dots and dashes and curves—a sort of trellis-work tattoo. There was blue tattooing on either side of her nose, a few tattoo marks were on the upper lip. And her forehead was tattooed elaborately in a design which probably pleased the poor woman immensely when she first saw it reflected in a land where fashion tells women to tattoo themselves.

The other woman was evidently the guardian, the conductor, of the poor girl with the tattooed face. She was an elderly white woman —VERY white. Her hair was snow white. Her white face was smooth and she beamed all over. She looked like Henry Brick's son, when he caught his first snapping turtle—too proud for words. The lady was evidently a missionary, or certainly a "kind-hearted" somebody bent on doing good.

She had the tattoo-faced young girl in tow. And it was clear that she was going to make a good Christian and a conventional lady out of her—barring the tattoo marks—or perish in the attempt. She gazed around at the crowd, proud of the excitement, with an eye that seemed to say, "Of course you don't know where I got her. I am doing wonderful things like this all the time—saving almost everybody."

In the dark-faced, sad-eyed, embarrassed woman who kept her eyes down and tried to cover the tattoo marks, there was an excellent lesson for the other women in the car—had they been open to it.

The tattooed face was of itself a good sermon on the folly of fashion. When that girl in some island home suffered pain and tried to smile as the rough tattooer worked the color into her face with a sharpened bone she felt that she was making herself very beautiful.

ALL WOMEN in her neighborhood, that could manage it, had themselves tattooed. All men, as a rule, married girls that had tattoo marks around their noses, on their chins and their foreheads.

Evidently, to be the right kind of a real lady, tattooing was the thing. And so this girl had herself tattooed.

In the street car yesterday she sat shamed and embarrassed—wondering, probably, what made the world so queer, and how it could happen that millions of women should not only live without tattooing, but look upon a fashionably tattooed person as more or less of a monster.

How like the other women in the car, although they didn't know it! How like the woman that squeezes in her waist because the others do it and because a majority of men marry wasp-waisted creatures with their insides squeezed out of place!

How like the women that bore holes in their ears to fasten in foolish things that cost money!

How like the women that wear high heels, shoes that pinch their toes and throw their bodies out of plumb, STRAINING THEIR BACKBONES AS THEY WALK!

How like all of our poor, foolish sisters that wear lunatic hats, queer dresses, wild colors—all in the belief that they are making themselves beautiful!

Poor, silly sisters, you are all just as foolish as the poor, brown, tattooed woman.

And if you could come back to this earth a few centuries from now, after real civilisation shall have arrived, you would feel as foolish and as much ashamed among the women of that time as the poor brown girl felt yesterday among you. You would hide in shame the patent leather shoes that squeeze you and keep out the air. You would try to conceal your squeezed waist with your hands.

But in THAT day you would find women that would look at you KINDLY, feeling only pity and friendship for you and a desire to make you happy. You would not find the woman of that day staring ruthlessly, thoughtlessly, with an expression of ridicule, at the misfortune and the mental suffering of another woman.

Mary's Little Lamb

The Latest Version of a Popular Nursery Ditty.

By Charles P. Clark

MARY had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow;
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.

The lamb fell ill one Summer's day,
And Mary sadly cried;
But pa made haste to sell the lamb
Before it really died.

Two weeks elapsed, and Mary's pa
Bought Beef Trust lamb potpie;
Now Mary and her little lamb
Together buried lie.

HISTORIC POINTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I would like to suggest a good plan for spending the Saturday half-holidays and some Sundays this Summer. A very good way is to take the time to visit the points of [illegible] around Boston, reading up on the places in advance. Concord may be visited in an afternoon, and so may Lexington and Salem, but to visit Plymouth of course requires a whole day. There are many other points which will readily occur to one that are rich in interest and at the same time are beautiful scenically.

THEY PAY A SMALL INSTALMENT ON THEIR WASH BILL

THE PROTEST

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

SAID the great machine of iron and wood,
"Lo, I am a creature meant for good.
But the criminal clutch of Godless greed
Has made me a monster that scatters need
And want and hunger wherever I go.
I would lift men's burdens and lighten their woe,
I would give them leisure to laugh in the sun,
If owned by the many—instead of the one.

"If owned by the people the whole wide earth
Should learn my purpose and know my worth;
I would close the chasm that yawns in our soil
'Twixt unearned riches and ill-paid toil;
No man should hunger, and no man labor
To fill the purse of an idle neighbor;
And each man should know when his work was done
Were I shared by the Many—not owned by one.

"I am forced, by the few, with their greed for gain,
To forge for the many new fetters of pain;
Yet this is my purpose, and ever will be,
To set the slaves of the workship free.
God hasten the day when, overjoyed,
That desperate host of the unemployed
Shall hear my message, and understand
And hail me friend in an opulent land."

> The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
> Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel. SHAKESPEARE.

Hints for Your Outing

By Wex Jones

NOW that the lazy days of Summer are making strap-hanging more a bore than a joy, every city dweller turns his thoughts toward a vacation.

To enjoy the Summer outing properly it is necessary to deny yourself all pleasures during the Winter and Spring, so that you may have more money to give the railroads and hotels.

Having saved up as much as you can, and borrowed as much more as you can, you are ready to have a ticket agent decide to what place you shall go.

If you are fond of fishing, endeavor to have the ticket agent send you to a place near a lake or a river. The water, although not really necessary to your post-vacation stories, lends a certain glamour to your days of idleness.

It is more expensive, however; for wherever there is water a guide will hire himself to you, and may even insist upon taking you out in a boat which is certain to leak and spoil your shoes.

A favorite way of spending a vacation is to make a sea trip. The steamship agent, when he induces himself to sell you a round-trip ticket, will give you a vast number of booklets concerning "The Millpond Route."

Great steamships cutting through glassy waters are shown on every page. Upon embarking go to bed. Stay there until you begin to care whether or not the ship sinks. You are then convalescent, and if the "Millpond" doesn't look like a relief map of the Rockies for the next few days you may get up in a week or so.

The rest of the time you spend in the smoking room, playing poker and paying two prices for one drink. On leaving the vessel you give the stewards the money you had reserved to take you home, and telegraph your family for the fare, adding something like, "Great voyage. Port your helm," or some such nautical phrase.
